What Is Top Notch?

Instructional levels

Top Notch (together with Summit) is a six-level communicative English course for adults and young adults.

- Top Notch Fundamentals: for true beginners or very weak false beginners
- Top Notch 1: for false beginners or for students who have completed Top Notch Fundamentals
- Top Notch 2: for pre-intermediate students
- Top Notch 3: for intermediate students
- Summit 1: for high-intermediate students
- Summit 2: for advanced students

The following chart shows the correlation of Top Notch and Summit to International Standards and Tests. For detailed correlations to the "Can do" statements of the Common European Framework (CEFR) and to U.S. federal and state standards, please consult the Top Notch website at: pearsonlongman.com/topnotch.

Scope

Each level of the Top Notch course contains enough material for 60 to 90 hours of classroom instruction. Split editions are also available. A wide choice of supplementary components makes it easy to tailor Top Notch to the needs of diverse classes and programs or to expand the total number of hours.

Goal

The goal of the course is to make English unforgettable, enabling learners to understand, speak, read, and write English accurately, confidently, and fluently. Three key features are emblematic of the Top Notch course:

- Multiple exposures to new language
- Numerous opportunities to practice it
- · Deliberate and intensive recycling

Content

Top Notch has a classic sequential grammatical syllabus. Grammar, vocabulary, and social language are integrated within topical, communicative units. Offering a balance of practical and informational topics, the content is designed to be consciously appealing to the student learning English.

Language and culture

Since English is the primary language of international communication, the Top Notch course goes beyond the traditional cultural and linguistic features of English. It prepares students to communicate with the diverse array of English language speakers around the world—more than two-thirds of whom are not native speakers of English.

Although the spellings, pronunciation, and usage in Top Notch language models for students are in standard American English, Top Notch integrates a variety of regional, national, and non-native accents throughout the listening texts and in the video program, Top Notch TV, beginning at the Top Notch 1 level. The first language of speakers with non-native accents is identified for you and your students. In addition, the Teacher's Edition contains a wealth of information, clarifying relevant differences between American and British usage.

In contrast to a focus on native language culture, Top Notch emphasizes "cultural fluency." This emphasis helps students build the communication skills and self-confidence needed to navigate social, travel, and business situations in unfamiliar cultural settings.

All spoken language models in Top Notch are informed by and confirmed with the Longman

Corpus Network, which collects both spoken and written samples of authentic language. Top Notch students can be assured that the language they are learning is authentic and appropriate.

Instructional design

The following is a synopsis of the Top Notch instructional design.

A communication goal for each class session. Each of the four numbered two-page lessons in a Top Notch unit is designed for one class session of 45–60 minutes, and has a clearly stated communication goal.

Three reasons for having a communication goal are to make each class purposeful, to demonstrate progress in each class session, and to enable a more focused evaluation. When teachers and students are unaware of the purpose of each lesson, they often just "go through the motions." Conversely, when teachers and students know the purpose of the lesson, they see value in it and are motivated to achieve a successful outcome.

Integration of skills and content. Research has confirmed that when students encounter new language only once or twice, they find it difficult to master or even remember. For that reason, new vocabulary and grammar are embedded in exercises, conversation models, pair work activities, listening comprehension texts, readings, and other activities to make them unforgettable. In each lesson, new language is examined, explained, integrated, expanded on, and applied so that students receive multiple exposures to the language as well as numerous opportunities to practice it in all skill areas.

Confirmation of progress. The culmination of each of the four lessons is a carefully constructed, guided communication activity called Now You Can. Each of these activities is a semi-controlled or free conversation, discussion, or role play in which students demonstrate their achievement of the goal of the lesson. Students are motivated by their success, and in keeping with the aims of the "Can do" statements of the Common European Framework, continually see the practical value of their instruction.

Explicit presentations of vocabulary, grammar, and social language. In order to allow the Top Notch Student's Books to double as both a teaching and a reviewing tool, language is presented explicitly. Explicit presentations take the guesswork out of understanding meaning, form, and use and provide a concrete reference for students to review. For those who prefer an inductive presentation of grammar, there are printable "Inductive Grammar Charts" on the ActiveTeach multimedia disc at the back of this Teacher's Edition. These charts provide an alternative (inductive) approach to each grammar presentation in the Student's Book. In addition, Vocabulary Flash Cards on the ActiveTeach multimedia disc can also be used for an alternative approach to presenting vocabulary.

A model-based social language syllabus. Each unit in the Top Notch course contains at least two models of essential social language in short conversations. Each of these Conversation Models serves a clear communicative purpose by embedding key conversation strategies. A full list of conversation strategies can be found in the Learning Objectives charts on pages iv—vii of the Student's Book. The Conversation Models in Top Notch are designed to be changed and personalized by pairs or groups of students, using the target grammar and vocabulary. This practice activates and engraves the language in students' memories, providing them with "language in their pockets;" in other words, language that is accessible and ready to use in real life.

A systematic approach to developing free expression. Top Notch features a four-pronged approach to discussion: idea framing, notepadding, text-mining, and wordposting (described in Methodology for a Communicative Classroom, pages Tx-Txi). These four techniques enable students to actively access, use, remember, and recycle previously learned language as they express their ideas. This approach results in confident and highly productive free expression and rehearses students for the real world.

A strategy-based focus on reading and listening comprehension. In addition to the rigorous practice of reading and listening, there is an emphasis on learning strategies. The strategies include such things as understanding meaning from context, distinguishing main ideas from details, comparing and contrasting, determining points of view, drawing conclusions, paraphrasing, and summarizing—all of which enrich students as learners and as communicators.

A systematic writing syllabus. The Top Notch course also contains guided writing practice. Beginning with Top Notch 1, writing activities guide students in the conventions of written English. The activities evolve with each level, taking student writings from mere written production of what students can say to carefully constructed and correctly written sentences, paragraphs, and essays.

A complete course. Top Notch is a complete course with a wealth of supplementary components and a simple integrated technology, allowing the maximum flexibility for all teaching styles, learning settings, and course needs.

For a pictorial presentation of all components of the Top Notch course, please see Student's Book pages ix—xi.

Methodology for a Communicative Classroom

The goal of any communicative language course should be to enable students to express themselves confidently, accurately, and fluently in speaking and writing; to understand spoken and written English as it is used in the world today; and to function socially in English in a variety of settings, both familiar and unfamiliar. Much practice is needed to reach those goals.

Because the typical student has limited opportunities to observe and practice English outside of class, the goal of the classroom must be to provide rich sources of input for observation as well as intensive opportunities for controlled and free practice. In other words, the classroom must become both a microcosm of, as well as a rehearsal for the "real world." It is the goal of this section and the goal of the Top Notch course to suggest a methodology which makes that possible.

Permitting active observation of language

Although the world is saturated with English (through the Internet, films, music, and television), much of it is incomprehensible to beginning and intermediate students and difficult and frustrating to learn from. Nevertheless, students should be encouraged to seek out and observe English outside of class whenever possible.

On the other hand, students benefit greatly and learn easily from exposure to models of spoken and written English at their own productive level or language just above that level. The level of challenge that benefits students most is often called "i+1" (Krashen and Terrell, 1983") or "comprehensible input." Comprehensible input is language that contains some unknown words or structures, but is still at a level that students can understand. Such language, especially when it is authentic, is extremely valuable for student progress and is abundant in the Top Notch course.

Although current methodologies often expect immediate production of target language, we believe that each class session should provide students with an opportunity to observe language by reading it and hearing it as well.

In order to benefit from the observation process, students should be encouraged to look at and/or listen to reading and listening material for several minutes in order for them to process it and to make connections between what they know and what is new. Only after students have had ample opportunity to immerse themselves in the observation process should they begin discussing the text or answering questions about it. And to maximize the value of observation, we strongly suggest that students support their opinions or answers by indicating where in an observed text or listening they got the information they needed to answer or to form an opinion. In this way, observation becomes an active process rather than simply a receptive activity.

Encouraging repetition of new language

Some people believe that repetition of language is indicative of an outdated behaviorist audio-lingual approach. Consequently, recent trends in language teaching tend to de-emphasize or discourage repetition of language being learned. However, we have observed that repeating new language is valuable as long as it is not overused and does not interfere with awareness of meaning. Repetition helps students remember correct pronunciation, stress, and intonation. It is recommended that students listen and repeat new language being learned for production.

For this reason, when students are learning new vocabulary or new social language, they should be encouraged to listen, or to read and listen, and then to listen again and repeat. When using audio materials as models, students appreciate the opportunity to compare their pronunciation, stress, and intonation with those of the speakers on the audio. We recommend that repetition be a regular feature of the presentation of vocabulary and model conversations.

For activities requiring students to listen and repeat, we suggest having students listen the first time while looking at the written form in their textbooks. This allows students to link the written form in the textbook to the sounds they hear. Next, as students are asked to listen and repeat, have them do it with their textbooks closed. This serves to reduce distractions and allows students to focus exclusively on listening and repeating, rather than reading. It also reduces the confusing effect of English spelling on pronunciation. However, if students find this difficult, allow them to keep their books open for visual support.

It is always beneficial to vary the method and sequence of repetition. Using alternative approaches does not diminish the value of repetition; the approaches add variety and help maintain interest. For example, it is not necessary to limit repetition to simply mimicking the words in the textbook. Occasionally, and within reason, students can practice by making small changes in conversation models as they are repeated. For instance, if the Conversation Model is "How have you been?" "Well, actually, I have a headache," students can be encouraged to change the model, substituting another ailment such as "backache." In this way, the original model is heard and used, yet not parroted mechanically, and still reinforces correct rhythm, intonation, and pronunciation.

It is best to keep the pace of repetition and personalization lively so that the greatest number of students have a chance to participate, maximizing their exposure to new language.

It is also beneficial to vary the number of people being asked to repeat. Sometimes it is helpful to have students repeat individually; at other times the whole class, half the class, all the males, all the females, etc. can be asked to repeat as a group. The goal is always served, no matter how the repetition is structured.

It is important, however, not to exaggerate the amount of class time devoted to repetition. A lively pace and a short time period will achieve the desired results; then it is time to move on to more substantive activities.

Ensuring that students use learning strategies

It is important to provide opportunities for students to work toward goals, to access prior knowledge, and to practice strategies such as planning, self-assessing, predicting, etc. These strategies have been proven to have positive results on students' learning. Knowing learning strategies is not enough, however. Research has shown that unless students are aware of the value of strategies, they are unlikely to incorporate them into their own learning initiatives.*

* The foundational learning strategies that follow are an intrinsic part of the Top Notch Student's Book. For teachers who would like to teach additional reading, listening, and vocabulary-building strategies, there are numerous printable extension activities on the Active Teach multimedia disc in the back of this Teacher's Edition.

Working toward goals. At the beginning of each term, before beginning instruction, probe students' individual personal goals in learning English. This discussion can be conducted in English or in the students' native language, depending on their level. Common goals could be for their profession, travel, academic study, etc. Help students become aware of how their course and/or their textbook will help them reach those goals; for example, by helping them learn to understand and communicate in spoken and written English. It is also worthwhile to encourage students to brainstorm a specific list of what they want to be able to do in English in practical or specific terms. For example:

I want to learn English because I want to:

- o order meals in a restaurant.
- o get directions when I travel.
- o give directions to foreign visitors to my city.
- o check in and out of hotels.
- o read academic journals or articles.
- o write e-mails or letters.
- discuss news and current events.
- o have social conversations.
- o use the Internet.

Have students look through their textbook to see if it will fulfill any of their goals. Ask them to point out lessons or units that they look forward to learning from.

Make goal-setting or goal awareness an important part of each unit and lesson. Before beginning a unit or lesson, have students look it over and brainstorm what they will be able to do at the end of it. Such awareness builds expectation of results, focuses students' attention on the purpose of instruction, and results in greater satisfaction with each class. Specific techniques for using the goals in class are covered in Applied methods: How to teach a Top Notch unit on pages Txviii and Txx.

Observing progress and self-assessing. When a brief discussion of goals takes place at the beginning of a class session, it then becomes easy for students to observe and confirm their progress that day. One simple way to ensure this is to ask "Did you learn how to give someone directions?" "What did you learn today?" and so on. When students confirm that the lesson's goal has been achieved, they value their instruction. Similarly, regularly review progress at the end of each full unit. In general, cumulative positive reinforcement of their study motivates learners to persevere. See a detailed explanation in Applied methods: How to teach a Top Notch unit on page Txxiii.

Being aware of the instructional process. Make students aware that presentations and activities in class, as well as those assigned for work outside of class (homework, projects, laboratory activities), have a definite purpose and are not random or accidental.

Effective lessons offer students presentations and activities that integrate target content. However, merely offering students such lessons is often not enough. The lesson will be more effective if students are cognitively aware of the value of each section of the lesson in achieving the lesson goals.

When finishing tasks, projects, and homework, take a moment to review the language students used in the task; for example, ask "Where did you use the present perfect today?" When students become aware that they actually used the present perfect in their conversations, practicing it becomes valuable to them. It is surprising how often students are not aware of the way in which activities help reinforce what they are learning. They often see a conversation practice session as isolated from grammar or vocabulary content, viewing it as just for fun or something to do to fill time.

Reflecting on one's learning. A number of hurdles must be overcome in learning a foreign or second language. One such hurdle is confusing the difference between understanding a word and being able to translate it into one's own (native) language.

Learners instinctively attempt to translate everything they read or hear, word for word. This is futile for two reasons. First, no one can possibly translate word-for-word quickly enough to follow a speaker speaking at a natural pace. Second, word-for-word translations are impossible for idioms, expressions, metaphors, or other figurative language.

In order to build students' awareness of this fact, we must help them reflect on the meaning of "understanding." Help them to see that they can in fact derive both general and specific meaning from spoken and written texts that contain words they have not heard or seen before. If students say they do not understand the meaning of a new word being learned, help them to describe its meaning, rather than to try to translate it. For example: assume you have presented the word tight (for clothing size) through an illustration depicting a person in a shirt that is too small. The caption states, "The shirt is tight." Because students already know the word small, they may be puzzled at seeing tight used here. instead of small. The natural impulse of learners is to search for a word in their own language that means tight. They will probably ask "What's tight?" To help students grasp the difference between understanding and translating, ask them to explain the meaning of "The shirt is tight." They will say "The shirt is too small." Point out to students that they in fact do understand the meaning of tight and that not being able to translate a word is different from not understanding it.

This is a profound awareness on which every learner of a new language needs to reflect. This awareness creates the desire and need to depend on context to infer meaning, promoting the development of one of the most important strategies for language learners—understanding meaning from context.

Managing pair, group, and collaborative activities

Collaborative activities, as well as pair and group work, facilitate interaction in English and are a hallmark of communicative language teaching.

These activities encourage students to use their own language resources, which in turn makes the lesson more personal and meaningful. They also ensure that students initiate as well as respond in English. Also, by working together, students get to know each other faster and become more independent; they rely on the teacher less for guidance and ultimately take more responsibility for their own learning. We recommend the following approaches for activities featuring pair and group work.

Creating a student-centered environment. Some students, particularly those accustomed to teacher-centered lessons in which teachers spend a lot of time explaining, may not immediately see the benefits of working in pairs or groups. Remind students that working together allows them more time to practice their English and allows you to listen to more students individually. Reassure students that you will circulate to give them individual attention and that this will make you aware of any points that need explanation.

Encouraging cooperative learning and collaboration. Encourage students to help and learn from each other; in other words, to create a community of learners in the classroom. Whenever possible, try to elicit answers from other students before answering a question yourself. If a student asks a question that was previously asked by another student, direct him or her to the person who first asked that question. Also, before asking students to speak in front of the class, build their confidence by having them rehearse language in pairs, small groups, or chorally as a class. Students can also collaborate on written exercises with a partner or group, either by completing the activity together or by comparing their answers.

Facilitating a flexible seating arrangement. To ensure that students interact with a variety of partners, have them sit in a different location for each class. When dividing the class into pairs or groups, try to match students of different abilities. One method of forming groups is to have students count off according to the number of groups needed. The "1"s work together, the "2"s work together, and so on.

Monitoring activities. During pair and group work activities, monitor students by moving around the room to keep them on task and to provide help as needed. When possible, avoid participating in pair work yourself, as this will limit your ability to monitor and offer assistance to the rest of the class. If you are faced with an odd number of students, create a group of three students. The third student can work as a helper to encourage eye contact and other socially appropriate behavior and to correct mistakes.

Managing time. To keep students on task, it is best to set time limits for each activity. End activities when most of the class has finished to avoid "dead time" during which students are waiting for others to finish. For students who finish a conversation activity early, have them write out the conversation they created. If you use supplementary activities, it is a good idea to have some of those photocopied and on hand.

Correcting errors purposefully

In general, language learners—particularly adults—like feedback and expect to be corrected when they make a mistake. However, recent research (Brown, 2007*) suggests that correcting errors in students' speech and writing may not be as effective in promoting correct language use as is commonly believed. In fact, research indicates that excessive correction in a communicative course can embarrass or dishearten students and discourage them from attempting the experimentation and practice that is essential for language acquisition.

In view of these findings, we recommend striking a balance between the need for correction and maintaining feelings of success. The following are approaches to provide effective and positive feedback.

Promoting accuracy. For activities where accuracy is the focus, such as controlled conversation pair work, address mistakes shortly after they occur. Students need guidance as they attempt to use new words, phrases, and grammar; immediate correction is important. Ask students to incorporate the corrections as they continue their pair work.

* Brown, H. Douglas. 2007. Teaching By Principles: An Interactive Approach to Language Pedagogy (3rd ed.). White Plains: Pearson Education.

Promoting fluency. For freer and more challenging activities where fluency and free expression are the focus (discussions and role plays), refrain from stopping the flow of student discussion with corrections. In these activities, accuracy is less important than communicating ideas, improvising, and remembering and using the full range of language students have learned. Developing the ability to retrieve and use previously learned language is critical if students are to convert the English they have learned in the classroom into the English they need in their own lives. Interrupting students with corrections discourages this experimentation. Instead, take notes on common student mistakes and then review those errors with the entire class at the end of the activity.

Encouraging self-correction. If allowed, students are often able to correct their own mistakes. First let the student finish the thought, then indicate by sound or gesture that there has been a mistake. Try to point out where the mistake was to give the student an opportunity to self-correct.

Some techniques for eliciting self-correction include counting each word of the phrase on your fingers and pausing at the mistake, or repeating the student's sentence and pausing at the mistake; for example, S: "He has two child." T: "He has two ....?" S: "He has two children."

A less intrusive method is to correct the student's mistake by reformulating what the student said without stopping the flow of conversation; for example, S: "He have a car." T: "Oh, he has a car?" S: "Yes, he has a car." Note that these techniques often prompt the student to self-correct.

Being selective. Do not try to correct every mistake. Doing so could discourage or overwhelm students. Instead, focus corrections on the skills that are being taught in that particular lesson or on mistakes that interfere with comprehensibility.

Providing emotional support. Above all, be careful not to embarrass students. Be aware that students may be sensitive to criticism in front of their peers and may prefer more private feedback. Give students enough time to think before they answer to avoid making them feel pressured. There is nothing more effective in promoting student participation than reinforcing their belief that you are "on their side." To that end, we suggest that you show approval for student experimentation, even when language is inaccurate. Correction can come later. Experimentation is an essential step on the road to mastery.

Checking and managing homework. Maximizing the amount of time students have to interact and practice English is essential in a classroom environment. It is best to limit the amount of class time devoted to checking answers and correcting homework. For exercises done in class, have students check their answers with a partner. This increases interaction time, ensures that errors get corrected, and encourages students to correct their own mistakes. It also helps students avoid the possible embarrassment of giving incorrect answers in front of the entire class.

When the class has finished comparing answers, review the correct answers as a class, either by eliciting the answers from individual students or by having volunteers write their answers on the board. In classes with time constraints, we recommend that you write the answers on the board, as this method is faster.

We suggest that you follow a similar approach with homework by quickly reviewing correct answers. In large classes, you may prefer to systematically select which papers to review out of class in order to give individual feedback and check progress. If five to ten papers are collected every session, each student will receive individual feedback several times per term.

Actively developing free expression

One of the greatest challenges in the English language classroom is successfully engaging learners in free discussions and role plays. Teachers often find that students sit silently, produce single short "fossilized" utterances, or resort to using their first language. Some impediments to students' success are lack of vocabulary, grammar, subject knowledge, or interest—or forgetting previously learned language. There are psychological and psychosocial hurdles as well. Adult and young-adult students have many ideas to express but worry that they will be judged by both their teachers as well as their peers.

The following four techniques form part of a process approach to discussion and are recommended to mitigate the challenge of free discussions and role plays. They support learner confidence and increase quantity, quality, and complexity of expression.

Idea framing. When students are presented—unprepared—with a discussion topic, they typically approach it narrowly; for example, if you propose a discussion of vacation preferences, students may only think about one particular aspect of vacations. Worse, students often worry about what you consider appropriate to include in the discussion.

Providing students with a stimulus such as an online or magazine survey or questionnaire can help them frame their ideas by indirectly suggesting topics to be included in the discussion to follow. Surveys and questionnaires you provide also reduce student anxiety by clarifying your expectations of what is appropriate to include in the discussion.

Notepadding. Giving students an opportunity to write notes helps them consider how they will express their ideas. Here again, students may start with a narrow view of what to include in the discussion, but when they are given preparation time beforehand, they will broaden their ideas and plan how they want to express them. Notepadding builds confidence and yields more complex statements than discussion without preparation does.

Text-mining. Although language textbooks usually contain readings that provide students with an opportunity to confront "i+1" comprehensible language, using these readings solely for reading comprehension can be a missed opportunity. One way to make the most of a textbook reading is to ask students to notice and select language from it ("mining its text") that they can use in a discussion or role play. Permit students to circle, underline, or copy "mined" language prior to classroom discussions. Text-mining greatly enhances students' ability to acquire and use language slightly above the level they have learned.

Wordposting. Another huge challenge to students is remembering known language—even recently learned language—and using it in discussions and role plays. But when students do not use and reuse learned language, they inevitably forget it.

To ensure that students recycle previously taught language, we suggest that you (or the students themselves) make and keep "wordposts"—lists of relevant recyclable language.* Wordposts can be written on the board or photocopied and distributed. To encourage the use of the wordposts during the discussion, you or your students can write a checkmark, cross out, or circle each word or phrase as it is used. Wordposting is one effective recycling technique that makes English unforgettable.

Teaching the receptive skills: reading and listening

Reading and listening are sometimes thought of as receptive skills. In a communicative classroom, however, reading and listening activities can greatly enhance speaking and writing, provide growth of comprehension, and help students cope with authentic language containing unknown words and complex ideas. The following are suggestions for approaching reading and listening in order to gain maximum benefit.

Authentic reading and listening passages will always contain a quantity of unknown language. We know that students can understand more language than they can produce, but they are often frightened to tackle readings or listening activities that include unknown language. (See the earlier discussion of the value of "i+1" comprehensible input on pages Tvi-Tvii.)

Readings and listening activities should represent real language. However, it is important to avoid language that falls significantly above the comprehensible level. Identifying a zone of comprehensibility enables readings and listening activities to maximize the building of comprehension skills and vocabulary.

As stated earlier, it is important to recognize that most language learners instinctively try to translate every word as they read and are frustrated by their inability to create a one-to-one correspondence of the English words to their native language. Adopting an approach that respects the amount of challenge a reading or listening activity presents, discouraging translation, and teaching reading and listening skills and strategies can help students read and listen successfully.

Reading strategies and applied comprehension skills. Reading skills and strategies that help students cope with the challenge of foreign- or second-language reading help prepare them to confront such readings with confidence. Some are practiced before, others during, and still others, after the actual reading.

Before a reading activity, encourage students to explore their ideas about the topic of the reading. To pique their interest in the reading, get them to access any knowledge they already have about the topic. Another strategy that helps students cope with a reading is identifying its source; for example, is it a magazine article, a website, a series of letters, an advertisement, etc.? These pre-reading strategies will help students approach a reading with the confidence that they know what is coming and will discourage them from focusing on every unknown word.

Some strategies and skills that help students while they read are skimming, scanning, and focusing on the context in which unknown words occur, to help students understand meaning (instead of trying to translate those words). Encourage students to quickly read the passage from beginning to end without stopping for details. One way to teach skimming is to have students read the first sentence of each paragraph and the first few sentences at the beginning and the end of the passage.

Scanning for specific information is another helpful skill. Before students read line for line, they can be asked to find information about dates, names, ages, times, etc. Such information usually identifies itself by format—numbers, isolated words, charts, and the like. Keep in mind, though, that not all readings lend themselves naturally to skimming or scanning. Only choose skimming or scanning with readings that naturally lend themselves to that sort of examination.

As students read and encounter unknown words, help them to find the context clues that "explain" the meaning of those words. In the following sentence, the general meaning of the word dousing can be understood from the context: "Songkran is a wild and wonderful festival in which people of all ages have fun dousing each other with water for three solid days." Many students would instinctively reach for the bilingual dictionary to look up dousing or simply decide the reading was too hard. But asking them to look for the meaning in the surrounding text (the "context," where they will find "with water") helps build the habit of searching for context clues and taking educated guesses.

A good way to help students see the value of searching for context clues is to ask them to explain their reasons for guessing the meaning of a word. Ask them to go into the text to provide support for their opinions. In the case above, students would cite "with water" to support their opinions. Note that a precise definition or translation is not necessarily the goal. Students should also be encouraged to guess the "sense" of a word; for example, whether it is positive or negative, male or female, something you eat or wear, etc. If this is done regularly, students will develop the habit of looking for meaning in the context.

After reading, summarizing a text is a valuable applied reading comprehension skill. When students are able to summarize a reading, it indicates that they have identified the main idea and can distinguish it from random facts or details that are included in the article.

One way to provide practice in distinguishing main ideas from details is to ask students to take notes as they read and to organize or separate their notes into categories; for example, in a reading about the experiences of a woman with physical challenges, students can be asked to take notes about her habitual activities in the morning, in the afternoon, and in the evening. In a reading about healthy eating habits, students can be asked to jot down information about foods that are good for you and those that are not good for you. Putting notes into categories helps students perceive the details that support the main ideas of a reading and can provide a framework for a logical and articulately expressed summary. A further way to help students understand the main idea of or the point of view expressed in a reading is to ask them to try to paraphrase what the author's idea is. As they read, ask students to put the author's words into their own words.

The Input/task ratio. When asking comprehension questions about a reading (or a listening activity; see below) it is helpful to keep in mind the relative difficulty of the text. If a text is very challenging and has a lot of difficult or unfamiliar language and complex ideas, questions and tasks should be relatively easy and receptive, such as determining general or main ideas. If a text is relatively easy, the tasks and questions should be commensurately more difficult, productive, and inferential, and should require more critical thinking. In other words, the difficulty of the task should be inversely proportional to the difficulty of the text. If this ratio is respected, even very difficult texts can be used by students at lower levels.

Listening skills and strategies. Listening is often frustrating to students because of factors such as speed, accent, background interference, and the fact that in the real world, a listener usually has only one opportunity to understand. In contrast, a reading text—even if difficult—can be explored, studied, and re-read at the learner's pace.

For most learners, understanding spoken language can be very difficult, especially when the speaker is not seen, as during a phone conversation or when listening to the radio, a podcast, or a classroom audio program. Listening skills and strategies can help reduce the natural panic that occurs when students listen to challenging speech.

If we want students to be able to cope with real spoken language, it is crucial to expose them to listening passages recorded at a normal rate of speed and in a variety of accents. When students are presented with unnaturally slow and over-enunciated listening passages, they may understand them easily and perform well on comprehension exercises. Unfortunately, however, this apparent success is misleading because it does not indicate that students will be able to understand authentic speech, which is inevitably faster and less enunciated. As language educators, it is important for us to ask ourselves what the purpose of listening comprehension exercises is in a communicative classroom. Is it to get students to understand every word they hear in a comprehension exercise or is it to help them learn how to successfully understand real spoken English in the world outside the classroom? Although we know the answer is the latter, we struggle with our own feelings of "failure" when students are unable to easily understand the listening texts we bring to class.

To offset our own fears as educators, it is important to explain to students the value of challenging listening experiences and to reassure them that the exercise is not a test of whether or not they understood everything the first time. Be sure students understand that the purpose of this practice is to help them obtain meaning, even from something that is not completely understood, and not simply to answer questions.

In presenting listening comprehension practice in class, be sure students have several opportunities to listen to each passage. Focus students' attention by having them listen for a different purpose each time they listen. Build up the progression of tasks from easier to more challenging ones. Add an extra listening opportunity again after other tasks in order to let students check their work.

The input/task ratio especially applies to constructing listening activities in the classroom. (See page Txii.) If the listening passage is fast, accented, or otherwise difficult, present a less challenging or receptive task, such as understanding main ideas or identifying the global purpose. On the other hand, if the listening passage is slow or otherwise easy, present more productive or difficult exercises. A convenient way to apply the input/task ratio to listening comprehension exercises is to compare them to the reading skills of skimming and scanning: for more difficult listening passages, expect students to "skim" by listening and getting the main idea, but few details, inferences, or complexities. For easier listening passages, expect them to "scan" for details, make inferences, and draw conclusions based on those.

In all cases, however, make sure students realize that these exercises are meant to increase their ability to cope with natural spoken speech, not a means to judge what they can understand on one listening.

Improving written expression

Writing tasks perform a number of useful functions in a communicative classroom:

- First, they offer yet another vehicle for students to remember, practice, and consolidate language they are learning, reinforcing vocabulary and grammatical conventions.
- Second, they promote the development of accuracy because students and instructors read and edit the writing; errors are visible and can be meticulously corrected.
- Third, they can prepare students for the real writing they will do in their work and - social lives: letters, e-mails, reports, articles, messages, and the like.

- Fourth, tasks based on a writing syllabus can teach students the conventions of standard written expression, such as sentence and paragraph development, use of topic sentences, and written rhetorical devices. These cannot be learned through speaking activities.

Students should have frequent opportunities to write. In every class session, they should be offered grammar, vocabulary, reading, and listening comprehension exercises that require a written response. Exercises should include word and phrase-level cloze or fill-in-the-blanks exercises; sentence-level exercises that require one or several sentences; and other controlled writing tasks. Such exercises should be corrected for grammar, usage, punctuation, and capitalization errors, either through peer-correction or through self-correction by seeing the correct responses on the board. Alternatively, exercises that have written responses can be collected and corrected periodically. (See section on checking and managing homework on page Tx.)

Students should also be given topics to write about. Even beginning-level learners can write short paragraphs based on the topic or theme of the textbook unit as long as the goal is specific; for example, if beginning-level students have learned the vocabulary of daily activities, the simple present tense, and frequency adverbs, a good writing assignment would be for them to write about their "typical day."

Expect an increase in both quality and quantity as students develop their writing skills. Students should be reminded and encouraged to actively use the language they have learned, and they should try to vary the vocabulary they use and the way they express themselves. In addition, they should always be encouraged to try and write a little more. If students share their writing in pairs or groups, have other students ask questions about information they want to know more about. Do the same when you read students' work.

Writing is a process that begins with ideas. Encourage students to brainstorm ideas, write lists, take notes,-organize their thoughts, use graphic organizers, etc. before they begin writing a first draft. Encourage revision as a regular habit in writing. Students should get feedback from others and look at their own writing critically for clarity of ideas. Then they should rewrite to try and improve what they wrote in the first draft.

When you first read your students' writing, respond to the ideas they are trying to express, rather than focusing on errors. Ask questions that encourage students to say more and clarify what they are saying. Focus on accuracy only after students have had an opportunity to revise and improve the content of their own work.

Intermediate-level and advanced-level learners can cope with more challenging assignments; for example, if students have completed a unit in their textbook on the unreal conditional, government, politics, and global issues, they can write an essay about what they would do about corruption if they were in government.

At all levels of instruction, however, it is important to construct a writing assignment that students are prepared to write about. Many failures in writing occur when students begin translating their ideas from their own language into English, instead of using the words, expressions, and grammar they are familiar with. When assigning a writing task, ask yourself if it will require students to use known language or whether the subject is unrelated to what they know.

To help develop students' abilities in the conventions of writing, it is helpful to link each writing assignment to a particular skill to be applied, such as correct capitalization or punctuation, the use of connecting or sequencing words, the inclusion of topic sentences, and introductory and concluding statements, and other features of effective writing. In this way, students practice the language they are learning as well as the conventions expected in English writing. Finally, so that students become familiar with the conventions of formal and informal written expression, vary the text types in assignments, from e-mails to formal letters and essays.

Commonsense Testing and Evaluation

One of a teacher's most difficult challenges is to construct tests that fairly evaluate global student progress. Without pretending to present an exhaustive approach to testing and evaluation, we offer a few principles. First of all, although all teachers accept the principle that "we should test only what we teach," this is easier said than done in a communicative classroom, where more than 50% of class time is spent practicing the oral/aural skills. If we were to "test what we taught" this would require more than 50% of our test items to evaluate listening and speaking. However, oral tests take a lot of time because each student must be tested individually; few programs provide enough time for such testing. For this reason, most programs rely on tests that are largely written.

We would like to suggest procedures that answer the following two questions:

- How can students receive credit for their progress in speaking— the aspects of language learning that have received the most emphasis in class? In other words, how can we evaluate speaking?
- How can we construct a written test that permits students of all ability levels to demonstrate their knowledge of the language they've studied and which measures their abilities in listening and reading comprehension as well as written expression?

Oral tests

As mentioned above, formal oral tests are very time-consuming. In a class of thirty students, administering a five-minute unit oral test to each student would take 150 minutes (two and a half hours). Almost no program could dedicate that much time to oral testing at the end of each textbook unit, so it's only possible to administer a few oral tests per term. However, teachers report that when there are very few oral tests, students tend to panic and perform poorly because the stakes are too high. And a test on which students underperform doesn't accurately assess their progress. A more practical and effective way to measure students' progress is to provide an ongoing, less formal, in-class assessment of speaking skills.

One approach is to keep a record of students' progress in each class session. If a class has thirty students, we suggest focusing on ten students in each session, making a mental note of their spoken responses in whole class, small group, and pair work activities. At the end of the session, make a notation in your record book in a form that makes most sense to you. One simple notation system is to give each student you evaluated a "plus," a "check," or a "minus" for that day's oral work. In the following class session, focus on the next ten students, and in the following session, focus on the final third of the students. In that way, students receive credit for their progress as they begin to retrieve and use target language to communicate in class. You can determine the criteria you wish to use to evaluate your students (e.g. fluency, accuracy, clarity, etc.). The important thing is that you have a record of each student's ongoing progress. This set of records can then be factored into the grade each student receives for the marking period, unit, term, etc. The percentage of weight you wish to give to this ongoing oral evaluation in relation to the written test is up to you and your program.

Written tests

How can we construct a written test that enables us to fairly evaluate the progress of all students—those who are gifted as well as those who struggle? All students learn, though not at the same rate, and some learn more from a textbook unit or from a lecture, etc. than others. We suggest that test items in written tests be weighted as follows so that all students who have progressed acceptably can demonstrate that growth on the test. (Note that the item types described below can be mixed throughout the test.)

We propose that 80% of the test items be receptive and literal ones. Examples of these item types would include such things as true and false, multiple choice, and cloze sentences with word banks from which to choose items. These items should "test" students' knowledge of the target vocabulary and grammar they studied in the unit. In terms of difficulty, these items should be at a level that all students who have studied and learned the material can answer successfully.

In turn, 10% of test items should be items that require more thought and more productive responses than those mentioned above. Examples of these items would be an answer to a question, a completion of a conversation response, or cloze sentences in which students have to complete items without benefit of a word bank or a set of choices. These items should "test" students' knowledge and use of vocabulary and grammar learned in the unit. Regarding difficulty level, these items should target average and above-level students. While it is possible that weaker students will correctly complete these items, it is not probable. It is worth noting that all students sometimes perform above expectation, and that performance should be encouraged.

The final 10% of test items should require responses of multiple sentences or paragraphs, etc. that indicate mastery of vocabulary and grammar and that may require critical thinking, such as inferential understanding of language and ideas in context from reading passages. These items would typically target the strongest students in the class. Again, it is possible, however unlikely, that some weaker and average-ability students might perform well on these items. Any success should be supported.

If a written test is constructed using items apportioned as above, all students can demonstrate progress, with the weakest students (who have worked to their capacity) probably achieving a potential 80% score, average-ability students achieving a potential 90% score, and the best students achieving a potential 100%. Of course, these percentages are not guaranteed, but they do permit even the weakest students to see their progress and the best ones to demonstrate their mastery.

A compelling reason for this approach to constructing written tests is to address teachers' frequent concern that their students don't "do well on the test." Research has shown that teachers often write tests that provide items weighted on the side of the most difficult content taught, under the rationale that "if students can answer these questions, I can assume they could have answered easier items." The consequence of this assumption is that many students don't receive recognition for the language they have learned because they are unable to answer the most difficult and productive items perfectly. However, it is our contention that the easier content, such as the knowledge of the target vocabulary, is at least as important as the ability to use the most difficult grammar. We believe that all of the content should be evaluated.

Once a score on a written test has been determined, you (or your program) can decide how much weight to give oral tests or the ongoing oral assessment in the student's global evaluation. If we are to truly test what we taught, and the amount of time spent on the oral/aural skills was 75%, then a case could be made for "counting" the written test for 25% of the grade, although few programs would adopt such a scale, for reasons of expediency. Our purpose here is to provide a starting point for discussion to enable programs to consider what weight to assign the oral and written tests so that each student's evaluation meets the goals of the program.

Studies have also demonstrated that watching violent movies and TV shows can affect children's stitindes towards violence in the world around them. Children who watch a lot of violence become less sensitive to it in the real world. If children find violence normal, they may accept more violence in society except more violence in society or even commit violent acts themselv

Very often, characters in movies and on television who commit violent crimes are not sorry for their actions and don't face consequences

So what can we do? With young children, we have the power to control the TV programs and movies they watch, so we can protect them from seeing any violence at all. However, with older children is the possible to completely prevent their exposure to violence. But we can try to limit the number of hours they spend watching it. # Applied Methods: How to Teach a Top Notch Unit

See pages Txvi-Txvii for pictorial examples of the following lessons.

Preview Lesson

The purpose of the Preview Lesson is to provide an introduction to the topic and social language of the unit. A Goals list at the top right of the first page announces the communication goals that are presented in the unit, building students' anticipation of what they will learn in the unit. We suggest that the four goals be pointed out at the beginning of the unit and then individually as each of the four numbered lessons begins.

The Preview Lesson includes highly authentic "i+1" language which should be comprehensible yet challenging for a student at that level of the Top Notch series. It is well-known that students make good progress when they are exposed to such language as long as they are not expected to produce it right away. When students see that they can cope with somewhat challenging language, their confidence grows and they enter the unit motivated with the expectation of success. The Preview Lesson contains embedded illustrations, contextual photographs, and other visual cues to meaning.

The material included in each Preview Lesson helps students activate prior knowledge of themes, topics, and language. It also actively helps them build the strategy of determining meaning from context. Encouraging students to use visual cues as well as the surrounding context will help them understand any unknown language in what they are reading or listening to in this first part of the unit.

Preview text. The first page of the Preview Lesson contains a text for students to observe, read, and think about. It may be a website, a menu, a self-test, an advertisement, or something similar. When important topical vocabulary is included, there is an audio icon (3) indicating that the vocabulary is recorded on the Classroom Audio Program and provides whole-class pronunciation practice of these words. Alternatively, you might ask students to access the audio directly from their ActiveBook for individual practice. In addition to the preview text and vocabulary, you will find one or more exercises that provide practice with the content and language of the preview text.

FYI: There are several options for accessing the audio. If you are using the Classroom Audio Program audio CDs, CD and track numbers are listed directly above the audio icon on the Student's Book pages; for example, 4:15 indicates that the recording is on CD 4, track 15. If you are using the Digital Student's Book on your ActiveTeach multimedia disc, you can click on the audio icons for instant play. Your students can do the same when using their own Digital Student's Book on the ActiveBook. Alternatively, your students can download individual MP3 files of each track directly from a folder on their ActiveBook. These files have the same CD and track numbers used in the Student's Book.

text or doing the exercises, allow a few minutes for students to silently familiarize themselves with its content and form and explore its details. Always remind students to use the illustrations and context to help determine the meaning of unfamiliar words and phrases. This is an important learning strategy for understanding material above one's productive level. When students have had a few minutes to take in the preview text, ask a few questions about the content of the text. (Specific questions for each preview text are provided in the interleaved section of this Teacher's Edition—the "Lesson Planner.")

The exercises that follow the preview text are designed to get students to start talking about the unit topic. These discussion activities help students use both familiar and unfamiliar (new) language from the preview text. Students can discuss in pairs or small groups. After students have concluded their discussions, review by asking a few students to share their ideas with the whole class.

Photo Story. On the second page of the Preview Lesson, a short Photo Story permits students to see an illustrated conversation that contains natural, authentic, corpus-informed social language in a story context. The Photo Story is not intended to be a conversation model for students to repeat and "learn." Rather, it is an opportunity to observe, read. and listen in order to notice language and how it is used. These examples of natural language will promote comprehension of real spoken English and will ready students for productive social language they will learn in the numbered integrated-skills lessons that follow the Preview Lesson. Top Notch Photo Stories contain highly appealing idiomatic language that many students will pick up and make their own.

A note about accented speakers in Top Notch: As mentioned on page Tv, in order to accustom students to listening to English in today's world, where native speakers of English have a variety of accents and more than two-thirds of English speakers are non-native speakers of the language, Top Notch listening selections include regionally accented native speakers (British, Australian, Canadian, U.S. regional, etc.) as well as accented speakers from a variety of other languages. The first language of any nonnative speakers in the Photo Stories is indicated on the Student's Book page. The Teacher's Edition identifies the regional or language background of all other speakers included in listening comprehension on the audio. We encourage you to share this information with your class and to remind students that English is an international language that is used to connect speakers from a variety of cultures and language backgrounds. Important: anything students are supposed to repeat (productive language models), such as vocabulary and Conversation Models are always in standard American English.

▶ Teaching tips Before students read and listen to the Photo Story conversation, ask questions about the photos, if possible. For variety, and to provide listening practice, you may sometimes want to have students listen with books closed. Another option is to have students read the Photo Story silently first, then read and listen, or listen without reading. (Specific suggestions for each Photo Story are given in the Lesson Planner, but we encourage you to use the approach you feel is best for your group.) No matter which approach you elect to use, however, it is always worthwhile to have students listen to the Photo Story, whether before or after reading it. (See FYI on page Txviii for alternative ways to access Top Notch audio.)

After students have become familiar with the Photo Story, ask questions to check comprehension. Use the questions that are provided in the Lesson Planner or your own questions. Questions can be presented to the full class, written on the board for students to answer with a partner, or read aloud for students to write answers to. If appropriate, ask additional questions that relate the content of the Photo Story conversation to students' own lives. Then proceed to the exercises that follow the Photo Story.

Photo Story exercises. A series of intensive exercises following each Photo Story provides practice in determining meaning of new language from context as well as activating previously learned language. One important feature of the second edition of Top Notch is an emphasis on asking students to explain their answers. In exercises called Think and Explain, students are asked to notice and cite key language from the Photo Story to explain the basis of their answers. In addition to building critical thinking skills, explaining provides an opportunity to make receptive exercises productive; it stimulates discussion in class and trains students to use context to support an answer. An added benefit of asking students to find support for answers within a passage is improved performance on standardized tests that expect students to delve into texts to extract meaning.

Other exercises ask students to classify or paraphrase language encountered in the Photo Story in order to demonstrate understanding. Many of these are called Focus on Language. These productive exercises build the essential skills of determining meaning from context and of using known language to "talk around" words not yet known.

The final exercise in the Preview Lesson usually asks students to consolidate the information, personalize it, or discuss it before moving on to Lesson 1.

be asked in open class, written on the board for students to answer with a partner, or read aloud for students to write answers to. Specific suggestions are made in the Lesson Planner. When time is short, these exercises can be done as homework and reviewed quickly in class. They remain in the book, however, as a convenient reminder of meaning when students study and prepare for tests.

Lessons 1 and 2

FYI: All parts of these lessons are described below. The order of the parts may vary from lesson to lesson.

Lessons 1 and 2 contain a combination of rich input of social language as well as presentations and exercises in several of the following skill areas: grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation, and listening comprehension. These lessons always feature a Conversation Model and Pair Work in which students personalize and change the Conversation Model by using target grammar and vocabulary. Each lesson begins with the statement of its communication goal and concludes with Now You Can, which provides an opportunity for students to demonstrate their achievement of the goal. Each goal corresponds to the goals that are listed in the Preview Lesson. All content within any lesson is designed to lead students to, and is important for, the achievement of the goal.

Lessons have been organized to make full use of the interplay between vocabulary, grammar, and social language, and to provide variety from lesson to lesson. The sequencing of the internal elements of each lesson is approached logically, sometimes starting with the Conversation Model and other times with the Vocabulary or the Grammar. However, you may wish to use a different sequence from time to time. This is possible because all parts of the lesson lead to its conclusion, Now You Can.

➤ Teaching tips Before beginning each lesson, be sure students focus on the goal of the lesson so that they will appreciate achieving it by the end of the lesson. Students should always be aware of their goals and their achievement.

Below are general suggestions for teaching all parts of Lessons 1 and 2. (Specific suggestions are given in the Lesson Planner.)

Conversation Model. A key element of the Top Notch pedagogy is the Conversation Model, which includes natural social language and conversation strategies. The models are appealing to students because their practical value is obvious. All Conversation Models provide at least one example of the target grammar and/or vocabulary from the lesson. The aim of each Conversation Model is to provide language students can "carry in their pockets" and can make their own. All Conversation Models are recorded so students can listen to the natural stress and intonation of spoken English.

▶ Teaching tips To build awareness and facilitate comprehension, begin by asking questions about the photo, if possible. Many questions are provided in the Lesson Planner, but it is not necessary to stop there. When you ask questions, however, be mindful of what students are capable of answering. Avoid eliciting language or information that students would not know prior to reading the Conversation Model.

One presentation technique is to play the audio of the Conversation Model or read it aloud yourself with a more confident student while the other students read and listen with books open (or closed). Then check students' understanding of the conversation by asking comprehension questions. The questions provided in the Lesson Planner help students focus on the essential information in the conversation and determine the meaning of any new language from context. Because at least one example of the lesson's grammar and/or vocabulary is embedded in the Conversation Model, the questions will also build familiarity, understanding, and correct usage of the lesson's target language.

An alternative presentation technique, especially in stronger groups, is to have students listen to the Conversation Model the first time with books closed in order to build comprehension and avoid being distracted by the written word. When choosing this option, have students begin by looking at the picture to raise awareness of the social situation of the conversation.

Rhythm and intonation. This activity directly follows the Conversation Model. It contains the same recording of the Conversation Model, but with pauses between the utterances so students can focus on and practice imitating the pronunciation, rhythm, stress, and intonation of the speakers on the audio. The Conversation Models have been recorded by native speakers who have standard American accents and speak naturally, but slowly enough so students can repeat at the same pace. It is important to make sure that students practice using socially appropriate pitch and intonation when they imitate the model. The teaching suggestions in the Lesson Planner provide specific rhythm, stress, and intonation points to pay attention to.

▶ Teaching tips Some instructors like to have students look at the text for support as they repeat. Some prefer to have students do the rhythm and intonation practice with books closed to avoid any interference caused by English spelling. We encourage experimentation to see which is more effective in your classroom. This exercise can be done chorally, with the whole class participating. Alternatively, or additionally, it can be done by students using their own MP3 audio from the ActiveBook self-study disc in the back of their Student's Book.

With books open or closed, students listen and repeat after each utterance. Encourage students to imitate the rhythm, stress, and intonation of the conversation as closely as possible. Once students are more familiar with the model, you might want to have them continue practicing by playing a particular role in groups or individually; for example, one half of the class can be the first speaker and the other half the second speaker. Finally, have students practice the Conversation Model in pairs on their own, using the words of the original speakers. Correct their pronunciation. stress, or intonation when necessary. In this way students will be thoroughly familiar with the model and will be better prepared to change it and make it their own.

Another, more dynamic, approach to rhythm and intonation practice can be found in "Speaking Practice" in the More Practice section of the student's ActiveBook. Instruct students to go to the Conversation Model for this lesson in "Speaking Practice" and have them select "Record and Compare." There they will be able to repeat each utterance of the Conversation Model, record their voice, and compare it with the speaker on the audio. (See a description of the ActiveBook on page ix of the Student's Book.)

Grammar. In the Grammar boxes, rules for new structures are presented through explanations of form, meaning, and use. Following each explanation are one or more examples so students can visualize the grammar in actual sentences or in patterns. Certain words and phrases are in bold color type in order to focus students' attention on those words within examples that show the form.

The Grammar boxes in the Student's Book present grammar deductively so that each presentation can serve as a reference for future review or study. However, if you prefer an inductive approach to grammar, an alternative inductive presentation of the grammar is also available as a printable extension activity on the ActiveTeach multimedia disc (click on "Inductive Grammar Charts"). (See a full explanation of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc and its contents on pages Txxix-Txxx.)

▶ Teaching tips The Lesson Planner provides teaching suggestions and guidance for teaching the grammar in each Grammar box. However, it is important to remember that although focused presentations of grammar are essential, actual use of grammar greatly enhances its learning and activation.

Each new grammar structure is included at least one time within the Conversation Model so students always read, hear, and understand the structure in a conversational context. If you have presented the Conversation Model prior to presenting the Grammar, revisit the model and ask students to find the grammar they have just learned. Seeing the grammar in conversational use will help students remember it. If you haven't yet presented the Conversation Model, take a moment to ask students to find the grammar within the model after they have read and listened to it. At the end of the lesson, after students have completed the conversation practice in Now You Can, be sure to ask them to find the grammar again in their personalized conversations. (See "Now You Can" on page Txxiii.)

Grammar Booster. Everything students need to be successful in the lesson is covered in the Grammar box. However, following most Grammar boxes is an icon referring students to the optional Grammar Booster. Teachers and programs differ, so the Grammar Booster is an option for teachers who want to go beyond what is normally included in a textbook for this level.

Each Grammar Booster icon indicates the content of the Grammar Booster for that lesson. In some cases, the Grammar Booster expands on the specific grammar point taught in the lesson. In others, it includes related grammar concepts, some of which will be presented in more detail at a later stage in the series. In still other cases, the Grammar Booster provides targeted review of related concepts students have learned earlier. The Grammar Booster contains confirming exercises for each grammar point presented. Answers are printed in green on the Grammar Booster pages in this Teacher's Edition, or included in the lesson plan on the page facing the exercise, just as they are within the unit lesson. Please note that the Workbook has a separate section for optional extra Grammar Booster practice.

▶ Teaching tips The Lesson Planner provides teaching suggestions for all grammar presentations and exercises in the Grammar Booster. We suggest that even if you decide not to use the Grammar Booster or if you elect to use only some, but not all of it, that students be made aware that there is extra material in the back of the book. Stronger students may be encouraged to work through this material on their own.

Grammar practice. One or more individual pair work or group work exercises always follow the Grammar presentations. There are several types in Top Notch. Grammar Practice exercises provide written or oral practice of the structures being taught. Find the Grammar exercises direct students to look for examples of the structures in the Conversation Models or the Photo Stories. Understand the Grammar exercises have students demonstrate that they grasp the meaning of the grammar or how it works. Some exercises require listening comprehension of the grammar in context. (For general suggestions for teaching listening skills and strategies, see "Listening skills and strategies" within Methodology for a communicative classroom on page Txii. For information on managing listening comprehension exercises, see "Listening Comprehension" on page Txxiv.)

▶ Teaching tips You may wish to complete the exercises with the class as a whole or you may prefer that students complete the exercises independently. If necessary, model how to complete the first item in each task. In large groups, you might divide the class so half of the class is working on those exercises that require an individual written response and the other half is working on those that entail pair or group oral work. With fewer students doing pair or group work at once, you will have more time to circulate so you can monitor, assist, and correct the pairs and groups. Then have the groups change tasks, allowing you to monitor and assist the oral work of the other students.

Specific suggestions are offered in the Lesson Planner for each exercise. When all the practice exercises are complete, you may wish to review answers with the whole class or have students check their answers with a partner.

If you would like your students to have even more practice of each grammar concept, encourage them to use their ActiveBook, where they will find numerous additional interactive grammar exercises with instant feedback. Students will find those by clicking on "Grammar and Vocabulary Practice." The Top Notch Workbook and the activities in the accompanying Copy & Go also include more grammar practice.

Vocabulary. Throughout Top Notch, new vocabulary is explicitly presented through captioned pictures, definitions, or in the context of example sentences. The vocabulary presentations in the Student's Book serve to convey clear meaning of each new vocabulary item and to provide a reference for self-study, especially valuable as students prepare for tests. Vocabulary in Top Notch is presented at word, phrase, and sentence level—including expressions, idioms, and collocations.

Teaching tips Begin by focusing students' attention on the illustrations, definitions, or example sentences. An option is to have students cover the words with a sheet of paper and look only at the pictures. Pairs can test themselves to check which words and phrases they already know. Play the audio program from one of the available sources. (See FYI on page Txviii for alternative ways to access Top Notch audio.) If you don't have access to the audio, read the words aloud as a model. Alternatively, or in addition, students can study the words and phrases individually, using the MP3 audio files from their ActiveBook. Students should listen and repeat. Note that in the vocabulary presentations, singular count nouns are generally shown with the indefinite article a/an. Students should use the article when they repeat. Depending on your students' language background, the concept of count and non-count nouns may present a challenge. Using the indefinite article to contrast singular count nouns with non-count nouns will help reinforce this concept. For vocabulary that is presented as collocations or in the context of sentences. students should repeat the whole collocation or sentence as well.

If necessary, clarify the meaning of any words or phrases students have difficulty understanding. For lower-level students, convey the meaning physically—through gestures, mime, or reference to people or objects in the room—or give examples or a simple definition. Specific ideas for each vocabulary presentation are in the Lesson Planner.

When possible, personalize the vocabulary or use the vocabulary to talk about or ask questions about content familiar to your students. Many of the activities that immediately follow vocabulary presentations provide these opportunities.

Vocabulary presentations are followed by one or more exercises that may include written or oral responses. Many vocabulary presentations are followed by a listening comprehension exercise to reinforce and practice the new vocabulary. (For general suggestions for teaching listening skills and strategies, see Methodology for a communicative classroom on page Txii. For information on managing listening comprehension exercises, see "Listening comprehension" on page Txxiv.)

For review and reinforcement of vocabulary or as an alternative way to present it, use the "Vocabulary Flash Cards" from the printable Extension Activities section of the ActiveTeach multimedia disc. The Teaching Ideas found in the "Vocabulary Flash Cards" folder also contain a wealth of ideas for using the cards. In addition. the Extension Activities section of the ActiveTeach multimedia disc provides printable vocabularybuilding strategies activity worksheets for many of the units. (See the "Learning Strategies" folder on ActiveTeach.) Another option is to ask students to use the More Practice section of their ActiveBook. Many of the activities in the Workbook and the interactive activities in Copy & Go provide more practice of the vocabulary as well.

Pronunciation. In addition to the rhythm and intonation practice that follows each Conversation Model, each unit presents and provides practice of a specific pronunciation point. Pronunciation points and activities are usually related to the lesson's content. Suggestions for extending this pronunciation practice are frequently given in the Lesson Planner as well.

▶ Teaching tips Play the audio from one of the sources, or model the pronunciation yourself. Have students first read and listen, then listen again and repeat. After students repeat, have them read the sentences to their partners. One technique is to have students exaggerate when they practice correct intonation, pronunciation, or stress to be sure they are focused on the pronunciation point. Remind them however, not to exaggerate the pronunciation point when they are really speaking. Remind students to practice the pronunciation point as well when they do the pair work activity in Now You Can.

To extend practice of the pronunciation point in a pair work activity, print out the corresponding "Pronunciation Activity" from the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc. If you would like do even more pronunciation work, print out the "Supplementary Pronunciation Lesson"* from the same source.

Now You Can. Each of the four integrated-skills lessons within Top Notch units ends with a feature called Now You Can. It is here, at the end of the lesson, that students demonstrate the achievement of the communication goal of the lesson. As students work through the exercises in this section, meaningfully activating the language of the lesson, they will feel motivated by their success and see confirmation of their efforts in achieving the goal. Because each goal has obvious practical and communicative value, students will see their English lessons as worthwhile. Cognitive awareness of progress is exhilarating for language learners and keeps them interested and learning.

Pair work activities. Now You Can sections in Lessons 1 and 2 always provide a guided conversation pair work, which is fashioned after the Conversation Model from the lesson. In the guided pair work, pairs of students personalize or role-play the Conversation Model, inserting their own choice of information in the blank spaces (gaps) so they can make the conversation their own. The gaps have been carefully placed within the conversation to offer a number of possibilities based on what the students have learned, so they are largely foolproof. The importance of this activity cannot be overstated, for it is in producing their own language in this controlled activity that students transfer language to reflect their own ideas, taking their first steps toward truly free language use.

Throughout Lessons 1 and 2 in Top Notch, the gaps in the Now You Can pair work activities perform a variety of roles. Some are included specifically because they enable students to substitute target vocabulary or grammar. Others are there so students can address each other with their own names. Still others are there so students can insert their own preferences; for example, foods or activities. Finally, others are there simply because students have already learned a number of ways to

This controlled communication practice makes the Conversation Model even more memorable. Additionally, it is of great value for pronunciation and intonation practice. Illustrations and other concrete cues are often provided to keep the ideas flowing.

So that students have more than one opportunity to personalize the conversation and practice several times, each time differently, Now You Can almost always directs students to first change roles and then change partners. With another partner or role, students access and activate even more language, making it unforgettable.

Don't Stop! So that students extend the conversation, a Don't stop! activity box suggests ways students could move beyond the actual Conversation Model, making it longer or taking it in another direction. Instructions have been carefully written to ensure that students have already learned any language they need in order to continue. In some cases, students are asked to continue the conversation by moving on to another subject that might naturally follow. Other Don't Stop! activities encourage students to ask and answer additional questions.

► Teaching tips Begin by focusing students on the title of the Now You Can activity. Remind them of, or solicit from them, the goal of the lesson so they are aware that they are about to achieve the goal. Then read the instructions aloud so students understand the purpose of the task and are reminded of the original Conversation Model and the vocabulary and grammar to use in performing the pair work activity. Show them the gaps in the pair work activity in which they need to use the grammar or the vocabulary from the lesson. Emphasis has been placed on building students' cognitive awareness of what they are doing. Research has shown that awareness greatly contributes to learning. To this end, ask students to look back at the vocabulary and grammar they learned in this lesson and encourage them to use it here.

Model the conversation with a more confident student to demonstrate that students should change the Conversation Model by filling in new language from the lesson or from other sources. Be sure students do not think the point of the practice is to test their "memory" of the original Conversation Model. The purpose is exactly the opposite. The point is express a particular thought. For instance, following "Thank you," a gap for a response is provided because students can respond in a number of previously learned ways, such as "You're welcome," "No problem," or "Sure!" Each gap has been tested to be sure students have enough language "in their pockets" to provide one or more responses.

personalization and experimentation. The most effective way to encourage experimentation is to show approval when students use imagination and variety in their "gap fillers."

Students practice the conversation with a partner and then change roles. Encourage students to vary their partners from lesson to lesson. As students practice, circulate and offer help and encouragement as needed. Make sure students are aware of the social situation of the conversation so that they use socially appropriate pronunciation and tone. To encourage active listening and socially appropriate body language, remind students to make eye contact during conversations. An option is to have pairs role-play their conversations for the class or for each other. Having different pairs of students perform their conversations in front of the class reminds all students of how much social language they have learned. Specific suggestions for each Now You Can section are provided in the Lesson Planner.

For additional reinforcement in class, direct students either before or after the pair work activity in Now You Can to the "Speaking Practice" section of their ActiveBooks. There they will find every Conversation Model in a format that permits them to role-play the conversation, recording their own voices as either Speaker A or Speaker B and responding in their own way, which they can play back as a complete conversation with the other recorded voice. This activity has limitless possibilities and is a lot of fun.

Another option or alternative is to print out and photocopy the "Conversation Pair Work Cards" from the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc (see page Txxix), assigning Speaker A's role to one student and Speaker B's role to his or her partner. This allows you to get students "out of the book" and actively listening to each other. Teaching Ideas are provided on your ActiveTeach multimedia disc to maximize the impact of this practice. (See the "Conversation Pair Work Cards" folder.) In addition, the Extension Activities section offers some printable activity worksheets for building conversation strategies (in the "Learning Strategies" folder).

Lessons 3 and 4

Lessons 3 and 4 provide integrated skills with a listening or reading focus. They begin with a communication goal and a pre-listening or pre-reading activity. Then each lesson culminates in a Now You Can activity, which is an opportunity for students to demonstrate their achievement of the goal.

Before You Listen and Before You Read. A Before You Listen (or Before You Read) feature prepares students for the reading or listening passage that follows. In some places vocabulary is presented prior to the passage. This vocabulary is taken from the passage and should be learned and used productively by the student both before and after reading or listening. Elsewhere, there are discussion activities that tap into prior knowledge or explore students' ideas on the topic of the reading or listening passage.

▶ Teaching tips The Lesson Planner suggests a procedure for each Before You Listen (or Before you Read) activity. In addition to the suggested procedure in the Lesson Planner, options and alternatives are also presented to help you approach these activities in a varied way. As always, we encourage you to use your own procedures with all activities and presentations if preferable.

Another pre-listening or pre-reading technique you can use in addition to what is already on the Student's Book page is to give students a few minutes to examine any photos, captions, headings, or charts in the reading passage or accompanying the listening exercise that follows.

Listening Comprehension. Listening passages and the exercises that follow them in Lessons 3 and 4 provide the core listening practice of the unit and focus on the building of listening comprehension skills and strategies such as listening for main ideas, details, point of view, prediction, and the like. (The Learning Objectives charts on pages iv—vii show the full range of skills and strategies covered in this level of Top Notch.)

Listening passages contain language at students' productive level as well as at the more challenging "i+1" level. Context, intonation, and similarity to language students already know all aid them in comprehending the listening passages.

▶ Teaching tips Point out to students that a major cause of lack of comprehension is the natural panic that occurs when learners hear unknown words. Be sure that they understand that the instructional purpose of a listening comprehension activity is to build their ability to derive meaning from listening even when they don't understand every word.

Make sure students understand that the listening comprehension activities are not meant to be tests, but rather skill-building activities.

To maximize the effectiveness of these activities, avoid providing students with explanations of new language beyond any vocabulary that was taught prior to the actual listening. If a student specifically asks about a new word, give the meaning, but do not spend a lot of time on it. Exposure to "i+1" language promotes students' language development and prepares them to fend for themselves outside a classroom, where there will be no one to explain language to them prior to hearing it.

If information about the speakers, setting, or situation is provided in the directions to the exercise, read it aloud before listening. In general, we recommend that students listen to the passage the first time with books closed. (In some cases, the Lesson Planner provides an alternative approach.) In this way, students can focus on the "big picture" without the distraction of completing the exercise. Alternatively, you might prefer to ask general questions (after the first listening), such as "Who's talking?" "Where are the people?" "What are the people doing?" If students are not forthcoming with answers to these questions, you can restate a question, providing two answers from which to choose. The value of this approach is to convince students that they have, in fact, understood a good deal, even if they have not understood everything. Demonstrating to students that they have understood something challenging builds their confidence and helps reduce their fear of listening.

Before students listen again and complete an exercise, have them look at the exercise to focus their attention on the specific listening task, such as listening for locations, for opinions, in order to predict, and the like. Play the audio as many times as necessary for students to complete the activity. Try not to approach these exercises as "tests." Repeated exposure to each listening passage has substantial instructional value. Increasing students' exposure to challenging language enhances their comprehension and confidence.

Review answers with the whole class, or have students check their answers with a partner. Be sure to ask students to explain their answers.

Please note that all listening passages are accessible on the student's ActiveBook. If, to save time, you wish students to listen individually and complete the exercises on their own, they can do that out of class. If an exercise is in the form of pair work or discussion, however, we recommend that it be completed during class time.

If you would like more exercises for the listening passage, there may be a corresponding listening comprehension strategy worksheet in the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc. (See the "Learning Strategies" folder.) If you want even more listening practice, there are additional listening passages and exercises for every unit, including dictation practice, in the More Practice section of the Student's ActiveBook.

Readings. Readings and the exercises that follow them provide the core reading experience in the Top Notch units. All readings are based on authentic sources. To avoid frustrating students at this level, we have adapted and simplified some of the language from the original sources, but have taken care to maintain the authentic character of the material. The readings in each unit are related to the content of the other lessons within the unit to facilitate discussion using previously learned language.

Exercises have been developed to go beyond simple factual comprehension questions and engage students in skills and strategies such as recognizing point of view, critical thinking, inference, and the like. Exercises are challenging and provide both receptive and productive responses. The exercises will not only build and check comprehension, they will stimulate discussion and help students build the skills they need to perform well on standardized tests.

► Teaching tips As with the listening passages, students should be reminded that it is not necessary to know every word in a reading in order to understand it. They should be encouraged to read without looking up every new word in the dictionary. Remind students that reading in a foreign or second language always presents the challenge of some unknown language. Students need to learn that they can comprehend main ideas. get specific information, and infer information even without knowing every word. If students are apprehensive about not being able to "translate" every word into their own language (which students sometimes confuse with comprehension—see "Teaching the receptive skills: reading and listening" in Methodology for a Communicative Classroom on page Txi for a discussion of this problem), encourage them to guess the meaning of new words as much as possible, or to comprehend as much as they can without understanding every word. After students read, ask questions or use activities that lead them to figure out the meaning of new language and that help them identify the essential information from the reading. The Lesson Planner makes specific suggestions to help students build the skill of understanding vocabulary from context.

Please note that all readings are recorded on the Classroom Audio Program for optional listening practice. Listening to the readings gives excellent ear training for the rhythm, stress, and intonation of narrative (as opposed to conversational) speech. It also builds students' awareness of collocations (words that "go together" as phrases.) Several optional alternatives for using the audio of the readings follow: If you choose to use the audio of the reading, you may play it as students read along for the first time, or not until after students have done all other strictly-reading applications. Or you may choose to have them listen with books closed for listening comprehension practice. Another approach is to use the audio as a model for reading aloud, which provides another level of pronunciation practice. The possibilities are numerous. We encourage you to use the reading audio in a way that matches your needs and your teaching philosophy. We also encourage you to experiment and try a variety of approaches. The Lesson Planner provides suggestions for using the audio as an alternative or additional activity.

For exercises following the reading, read the directions aloud, or ask volunteers to read them. Have students read the exercise items and then reread the reading passage independently. As students read, they can underline words or information that will help them complete the exercise. Allow students a set period of time to refer to the reading to complete the exercise individually, in pairs, or in small groups. Have students check their work with another pair or group, or review answers as a class. For a challenge, have students practice reading the passage or parts of it aloud in small groups.

In addition to the exercises on the page, optional basic comprehension and critical-thinking exercises on the same reading passage ("Extra Reading Comprehension Questions") can be printed out from the student's ActiveBook. There are also extra reading exercises for the same passage in the Workbook. To teach strategies and prepare students for tests, there are printable activity worksheets for reading strategies in the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc. (See the "Learning Strategies" folder.) Printable "Extra Reading Comprehension Questions" are also in the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc.

If you are looking for even more reading practice, there are additional reading passages and exercises in the More Practice section of the student's ActiveBook.

Now You Can. As in Lessons 1 and 2, Now You Can is an activity in which students demonstrate the achievement of the communication goal of the lesson. In Lessons 3 and 4, Now You Can is an integrated free-speaking activity based on the content and theme of the reading or listening passage. Surveys, questionnaires, and notepadding activities are included to help students frame their thoughts and prepare what they will say.

▶ Teaching tips Success in the discussion or role play will be greatly enhanced by allowing students adequate time to complete any surveys and notepadding activities. (For an expanded discussion of this, see "Actively developing free expression" in the section entitled Methodology for a communicative classroom on pages Tx-Txi.) In every case, the Lesson Planner provides detailed suggestions and alternatives.

Be Sure to Recycle This Language. When language is out of sight it is often out of mind. The Be Sure to Recycle This Language feature, which represents a major instructional strategy of the Top Notch course, ensures that students get multiple opportunities to use previously learned language, making it unforgettable. The language listed in the form of "wordposts" has been included because it will support students in their discussions within Now You Can. (See a discussion of wordposting in "Actively developing free expression" on page Txi.) Be Sure to Recycle This Language boxes cumulatively gather language from the unit as well as from previous units, listing it to be used as wordposts. No unknown language is included.

▶ Teaching tips Focus students' attention on the wordposts and encourage them to look at the words and phrases as they conduct their discussions, role plays, and the like. One option is to have students check each one off as it is used. Alternatively, have students report which language they used after the activity is completed. Give students positive feedback when they use the wordposts, and encourage them to remember and use all the language that is, or should be, in their repertoire. To further elevate the importance of the wordposts, ask students to use the Unit Study Guides (which can be printed from the student's ActiveBook or from your ActiveTeach multimedia disc) for each Now You Can activity, adding other language they have used and want to remember. If your class always meets in the same classroom, you may wish to have a permanent "word wall"—wordposts on large paper displayed on the classroom walls-that students can consult for support. (See "Wordposting" on page Txi.)

Review

The left-hand page reviews essential content and skills from the unit and provides exercises that require a written response. The first activity is always a listening comprehension exercise, and the page always ends with a writing assignment in which students use the language content of the unit in a formal piece of writing that contains one or more paragraphs.

Writing Booster. An optional Writing Booster teaches and practices the conventions of written English and provides guidance for the writing activity on the page. (To see a list of the scope and sequence of writing skills in this level of Top Notch, see the Learning Objectives charts on pages iv-vii.) We suggest that even if you decide not to use the Writing Booster, or if you elect to use only some, but not all of it, students be made aware of it. Stronger students may be encouraged to work through this material on their own.

Oral Review. The right-hand page contains the Oral Review, a signature feature of the Top Notch course—a full-page illustration or a set of photos with instructions to use it as a stimulus for an oral review of the entire unit. The picture provides a clear visual context for practice and helps bridge the gap between practice and authentic language use. Activities on the page prompt students to find and name items in the picture, ask and answer questions about the picture, create conversations between people in the picture, tell stories about the people or situations in the picture, and more.

▶ Teaching tips Have students work individually to complete the exercises. Move around the room to offer help as needed. Review the correct answers as a class. Alternatively, or to save time, you may wish to have students complete these exercises as homework, reviewing the answers quickly the next day. Note any areas of difficulty and provide additional instruction and practice as necessary.

For the writing activity, there are optional "Writing Process Worksheets" you can print out from the Extension Activities section of your ActiveTeach multimedia disc.

▶ Teaching tips Specific suggestions for getting full value out of each illustration are provided in the Lesson Planner for each Oral Review. Depending on the focus of the picture(s), the Lesson Planner indicates responses your students should be able to produce as they follow the directions at the top of the page. This information is enclosed in a text box on the Lesson Planner page and is called "Possible responses."

Begin by having students read the directions for each activity. Be sure they review the example provided to feel confident they know what is expected. You may wish to have all students do each activity at the same time, or alternatively, you may wish to divide the class so that groups of students are working on different activities. Divide students into pairs or small groups. Move around the room and offer help as needed. To encourage risk-taking and improvisation, avoid interrupting students with corrections. Instead, take notes on common student mistakes and review them as a class at the end of the activity. Encourage students to say as much as they can and to extend the suggested tasks as much as possible. The following are some techniques that teachers have found successful with the Oral Review:

- Word Memory Game. Allow students to look at the picture for one minute. Then have them close their books and write down all the vocabulary items they can remember from the picture. See who remembers the most items.
- Groups of Four. In pairs, students write three true statements and three false statements about the picture. Regroup students into groups of four. One pair reads their statements, in random order, to the other pair, who replies true or false.
- Chain Story. One group (or pair) begins by saying a sentence about the picture, and the next group follows by saying another sentence. Groups that can no longer say anything are eliminated until only one group (or pair) remains.
- Content Memory Game. Give students one minute to study the picture and remember all they can about it. Then have students close their books and form small groups. Ask questions about the picture and keep a record of the correct answers. After each question, allow the groups time to discuss and write down an answer. Review as a class and see which group has the most correct answers.
- "Who Said It?" Game. Give each character in the picture a name. Working in pairs, students write one line of conversation for each person in the picture. Then each pair of students joins another pair. Pairs take turns reading their lines and guessing who in the picture is speaking. Students may answer with the name of the character, by pointing, or by describing the character; for example, "the short woman."
- Mystery Characters. Have volunteers act out one of their conversations in front of the class.
   Students listen and guess which people in the picture are being portrayed.
- "What Did They Say?" Game. Have two volunteers act out their conversation in front of the class. The class listens and tries to

- remember exactly what was said. Working in pairs, students try to re-create the exact conversation they heard.
- Script-Scramble. In pairs, students write their conversation in dialogue form. Each pair then writes each line of its conversation on a separate slip of paper, mixes up the order of the slips, and gives them to another pair. The other pair must then put the conversation back in the correct order.
- This is Your Life. Have students choose one person in the picture and write his or her biography. The details of the person's life should be based on what is in the picture, but students will have to make up much of the information. Have volunteers read their biographies to a group or to the class and have students guess who in the picture is being described.

Oral Progress Assessment. An optional Oral Progress Assessment based on the full-page picture is provided in the Lesson Planner.

▶ Teaching tips The Oral Progress Assessment is designed to take no more than five minutes per student. These short tests make it possible to check class progress quickly. The Oral Progress Assessment Charts can be printed from your ActiveTeach multimedia disc and used to guide your assessment. Please note that the Complete Assessment Package provides Speaking Tests after Unit 5 and Unit 10.

- Now I Can. This check box is provided for students to self-assess and demonstrate that they have achieved the communication goals of the unit.

  These goals appear in the Preview Lesson and then again at the beginning of the four integrated-skills lessons (Lessons 1–4). The check-box format is used in the spirit of the Common European Framework's "Can do" statements. Allowing students to check off each achieved goal is a motivating and success-confirming experience.
- Teaching tips Students can check the goals off at the end of the unit, demonstrating to themselves how much they've learned. Alternatively, they can check each one off at the end of each of the four lessons. We recommend that time be taken for informal congratulations to the students for their progress. One extension is to ask students where and when they imagine they can use their new communication abilities.

To the Teacher

What is Top Notch?

Top Notch is a six-level* communicative course that prepares adults and young adults to interact successfully and confidently with both native and non-native speakers of English.

The goal of the Top Notch course is to make English unforgettable through:

- Multiple exposures to new language
- ▶ Numerous opportunities to practice it
- Deliberate and intensive recycling

The Top Notch course has two beginning levels: Top Notch Fundamentals for true beginners and Top Notch 1 for false beginners.

Each full level of Top Notch contains enough material for 60 to 90 hours of classroom instruction. A wide choice of supplementary components makes it easy to tailor Top Notch to the needs of your classes.

*Summit 1 and Summit 2 are the titles of the fifth and sixth levels of the Top Notch course.

All Student's Books are available in split editions with bound-in workbooks.

The Top Notch instructional design

Daily confirmation of progress

Each easy-to-follow two-page lesson begins with a clearly stated communication goal. All lesson activities are integrated with the goal and systematically build toward a final speaking activity in which students demonstrate achievement of the goal. "Can-do" statements in each unit ensure students' awareness of the continuum of their progress.

A purposeful conversation syllabus

Memorable conversation models provide essential and practical social language that students can carry "in their pockets" for use in real life. Guided conversation pair work enables students to modify, personalize, and extend each model so they can use it to communicate their own thoughts and needs. Free discussion activities are carefully crafted so students can continually retrieve and use the language from the models. All conversation models are informed by the Longman Corpus of Spoken American English.

An emphasis on cultural fluency

Recognizing that English is a global language, Top Notch actively equips students to interact socially with people from a variety of cultures and deliberately prepares them to understand accented speakers from diverse language backgrounds.

Intensive vocabulary development

Students actively work with a rich vocabulary of high-frequency words, collocations, and expressions in all units of the Student's Book. Clear illustrations and definitions clarify meaning and provide support for independent study, review, and test preparation. Systematic recycling promotes smooth and continued acquisition of vocabulary from the beginning to the advanced levels of the course.

A dynamic approach to grammar

An explicit grammar syllabus is supported by charts containing clear grammar rules, relevant examples, and explanations of meaning and use. Numerous grammar exercises provide focused practice, and grammar usage is continually activated in communication exercises that illustrate the grammar being learned.

A dedicated pronunciation syllabus

Focused pronunciation, rhythm, and intonation practice is included in each unit, providing application of each pronunciation point to the target language of the unit and facilitating comprehensible pronunciation.

Learning Strategy (Unit 5, page 55, Reading)

READING STRATEGY: clarifying your own point of view

When you read something that expresses an opinion or gives advice, think about your gong point of view.

Respond to each letter with your own advice. Do you agree or disagree with the advice Dr. Weiss gave to each person?

Dear Dr. Wessex When I was young, I was a chocoholie. I are a lot of chocolate, but never gained any weight. Now that I'm older, I can't est anything without paining weight! I've heard that dipowerter is the answer to an overweight person's divense. What's up with that?

I'm a 24-year-old man who is already losing his hair! Dr. Weles, I'm looking for a wife and I'm afinid no woman will want to marry a 25-year-old baldie! I need some advice

Dear Dr. Weine

Greetings and Small Talk

GOALS After Unit 1, you will be able

- 1 Get reacquainted with someone.
- 2 Greet a visitor to your country.
- 3 Discuss gestures and customs.
- 4 Describe an interesting experience

Preview

Customs Around the World

Greetings People greet each other differently around the world.

Some people bow.

Some people kiss once. Some kiss twice.

Some shake hands.

And some hug.

Exchanging Business Cards

People have different customs for exchanging business cards around the world.

Some customs are very formal. People always use two hands and look at the card carefully.

Other customs are informal. People accept a card with one hand and quickly put it in a pocket.

Small Talk

What about small talk—the topics people talk about when they don't know each other well?

In some places, it's not polite to ask about someone's age or salary. In others, it's considered rude to ask about someone's family.

- A Pair work In your opinion, is there a right way and a wrong way to greet people? Explain.
- B Discussion In your country, are there any topics people should avoid during small talk? What about the topics below?
  - the weather
  - someone's job
  - someone's religion
- someone's family
- someone's home
- · (other) .

How to plan a Top Notch lesson

The teaching suggestions for each two-page lesson add up to a total teaching time of 45-60 minutes. Your actual teaching time will vary from the times suggested, according to your needs, your schedule, and the needs of your class.

Activities labeled "Option" are additional to the 45-60 minutes, and the estimated teaching time for each is noted with the activity.

In addition, you will see other optional extensions to the material on the Student's Book page. These of course will also increase the time allotted to the lesson:

ActiveTeach Multimedia Disc

Edition

An extension activity from the ActiveTeach Multimedia Disc in the back of this Teacher's

GRAMMAR BOOSTER An optional feature at the end of the Student's Book

WRITING BOOSTER An optional feature at the end of the Student's Book

EXTRAS (optional) Available supplementary components to support the lesson

These optional activities can be assigned as homework or class work. They come from the Workbook, Copy & Go, Top Notch TV, and the Complete Assessment Package.

Oral Progress Assessment and Top Notch Project

At the end of each unit there is also an optional oral progress assessment and Top Notch project. Time for these activities depends on the size of your class.

The Top Notch authors strongly encourage you to view these lesson plans and accompanying options and extensions as a menu of possibilities in creating the best lesson plan for you. You may wish to construct your lesson entirely without the options and extensions, or to extend the lesson to do all possible activities. The suggested teaching times are provided to help you do that.

Preview

Suggested	12-17	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

Before Exercise A, give students a few minutes to silently read and examine the photos and information about customs.

· Ask a volunteer to read the heading Customs Around the World.

- · Call on students to read the section headings and the photo descriptions.
- To focus on Greetings, ask students for additional ways to greet people and write them on the board. (Possible responses: Pat on the back, nod, smile.)
- · Focus on Small Talk by explaining that small talk is conversation about minor topics. Ask students to name additional topics that can be used for small talk. (Possible responses: The weather, hobbies, work.)

Language and culture*

- · Customs vary from culture to culture. In Japan. business cards are always presented to another person with two hands to show respect. In English-speaking countries, hugging or kissing is reserved for friends or close associates. In some cultures, asking about a person's age, salary, or family is acceptable; in English-speaking countries, asking about age or salary can be rude, but asking about family is polite and often expected.
- *Language and culture notes are provided to offer students enrichment or more information about language and / or culture. Their use is optional.

Vocabulary Flash Cards

A Pair work

Suggested	3	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- · For a warm-up, ask How do you usually greet people?
- · On the board, write What behaviors would be unusual or strange in your country? Why?
- · Have pairs discuss the questions; then call on students to share their opinions with the class.

B Discussion

Suggested	7-12	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Model the activity by discussing the questions with a more confident student. Review the question and topics in the box with the class. Encourage students to fill in the blank with another conversation topic.
- · Divide the class into groups of three and have students read and discuss the questions. Move around the room and help students as needed.
- · Review answers with the class. Ask Which topics would you feel uncomfortable talking about? Most comfortable? What other topics did you think of?

C ♥<sup>3)</sup> Photo story

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

• To prepare students for the activity, have them look at the photos. Ask:

Do you think the two men know each other well? (No.) How do they greet each other in the second photo? (By shaking hands.)

How do they exchange business cards? (Taka uses two hands to hold the card.)

- Have students read and listen to the conversation once or twice.
- To check comprehension, ask:
   What countries are they from? (Japan, Mexico.)

Language and culture

- IT refers to information technology.
- What have you been up to? means What have you been doing? and is commonly used in spoken English. The expression can be used in different tenses; for example, What are you up to these days? What were you up to?

Option: [+5 minutes] To extend the activity, have pairs role-play the Photo Story. Tell them to replace the names in the book with their own names.

Option: [+10 minutes] To challenge students, have them create and role-play their own conversations using the underlined expressions from the exercise. Tell them to imagine they met some time in the past and that now they meet again. For example,

A: You look familiar. I'm ____

B: Oh, yes, I think we met at ___ last week. I'm ___....
Volunteers can present their role play to the class.

"English for Today's World," indicates that one or both of the speakers in the Photo Story is not a "native speaker" of English. Remind students that in today's world, they must learn to understand both a variety of standard and regional spoken native accents as well as non-native accents because most English speakers in the world are not native speakers of the language.

Language backgrounds are shown in a footnote so you can point them out to students.

The oval at the top of this page, titled

CONVERSATION MODEL

- Read and listen to people getting reacquainted.
  - A: Audrey, have you met Hanah?
  - B: No, I haven't.
  - A: Hanah, I'd like you to meet Audrey.
  - C: Hi, Audrey. You look familiar. Have we met before?

has met = 's met have not met = haven't met has not met = hasn't met

GRAMMAR

The present perfect

Use the present perfect to talk about an indefinite time in the past. Use the simple past tense to talk about a definite or specific time.

present perfect: indefinite time I've met Bill twice.

simple past tense: definite time We met in 1999 and again in 2004.

Form the present perfect with have or has and a past participle. For regular verbs, the past participle form is the same as the simple past form: (open → opened, study → studied) haven't | met them.

Have you met them? Yes, we have. / No, we haven't.

Has she called him? Yes, she has. / No, she hasn't

A Pair work Complete the conversations with the present perfect or the simple past tense. Then practice the conversations with a partner.

A: Has Jake met our new teacher?

...... her in the office this morning.

2 A: Have they been to this class before?

B: No, ... they haven't ... They're new at this school.

A: Have you eaten in the new school restaurant?

B: No, I haven't Is it good?

4 A: Have your classmates spoken with the school director?

your classmates / speak

B: Yes, they have . They spoke with her yesterday.

5 A: Has Beth seen the new language lab?

B: No, She hasn't . But she has seen the library.

These conversation strategies are implicit in the model:

- Use "I don't think so" to soften a negative answer.
- Say "I know!" to exclaim that you've discovered an answer.
- To prepare students for the activity, ask What's happening in the picture? (A man is introducing two women.) Is this a business or a social situation? (Social.)
- After students read and listen to the conversation, make sure they understand the conversation strategies by asking comprehension questions; for example, Does Audrey recognize Hanah right away? (No.) Does Hanah recognize Audrey? (Yes.)

B ()) Rhythm and intonation

Suggested	3	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Have students repeat each line chorally. Make sure they:

GRAMMAR

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- To introduce the structure, write on the board 1 They've met before. 2 She met him yesterday.
- Ask:

Which sentence mentions specific time in the past?
(Number 2, yesterday.)
What is the verb in sentence 2? (Met.)
What tense is the verb? (Simple past tense.)
Write simple past tense above the sentence.

- Read the underlined verb in the first sentence. Then write present perfect above it. Explain that this sentence uses the present perfect because it does not mention a specific time in the past. We don't know exactly when she met him.
- To help students identify the difference between specific and non-specific times, explain that a specific time tells them when something happened. Practice this concept by presenting pairs of sentences and asking if the time is specific. For example, I've read that book. Is this specific? (Non-specific—at some time in the past.) I read that book last week. (Specific—last week.)
- Ask a student to read the first point in the Grammar box. Point out the specific time references in the simple past tense (1999, 2004). Make sure students understand the meaning of indefinite (non-specific) and definite (specific). Explain that the example in the present perfect does not have a definite time reference. We don't know when this person has met Bill.

- After reading the second point in the Grammar box, ask volunteers to read the example sentences. Ask Which verb is regular? (Called.) What is the base form of this verb? (Call.) Which verb is irregular? (Met.) What is the base form of this verb? (Meet.)
- Review the formation of the simple past; remind students that regular verbs form the simple past tense by adding -ed to the base form. The past participle form is the same. Explain that irregular verbs do not form the simple past tense by adding -ed. The past participle form may be the same as the simple past form or different.
- Point out the contractions in the sentences and ask students to give the full form for each (have-have not; has-has not). Be sure to explain that short answers in the present perfect only contract the negative form and affirmative form.
- Ask a volunteer to read the remaining two example sentences. Go over question formation in the present perfect (have / has + noun / pronoun + past participle).
   Write Have you taken a writing course? Have you read today's newspaper? Have students respond. (Yes, I have. / No, I haven't.)

- Point out the list of simple past forms and past participles for irregular verbs in the Grammar box.
   Remind students not to include the past participle in the short answers.
- After pairs have compared answers, have volunteers read the conversations aloud to the class.

Language and culture

- In British English, the past forms of some words can be regular or irregular. For example, you can say burned or burnt, learned or learnt, spelled or spelt. The regular past forms of these words are always used in American English.
- The past participle of get is got in British English; in American English, the past participle of get is gotten.

Option: [+10 minutes] To challenge your students, have them work in pairs to prepare two short conversations. Tell students to use the present perfect in the question and the simple past tense or the present perfect in the response. Move around the room to provide help and answer questions. After finishing, have pairs role-play their conversations for the class. Ask the class to listen for the verb form and any definite time references in the response. #### NOW YOU CAN Get reacquainted with someone

Suggested	13-18	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- To review getting reacquainted with someone, refer students to the Conversation Model on page 4.
- Ask a volunteer to read the Ideas list. Ask Which of these places do you go to often? Why? At which places do you usually meet new people?
- Have students fill in their own idea and share answers with the class.

Don't stop! Extend the conversation. Encourage students to continue the conversation by using topics in the box.

- Be sure to reinforce the use of conversation strategies.
   On the board, write Body language. Demonstrate the use of appropriate gestures and facial expressions; for example, looking puzzled when responding "I don't think so..." to the question Have we met before?
- Model the activity by role-playing with a more confident student. Take the role of Student A and use student names; for example, Peter, have you met Mary? Then extend the conversation by using a situation from the Ideas and Don't Stop! boxes.

- Divide the class into groups of three. Tell students to fill in the blanks and continue the conversation. Encourage students to refer to the Ideas list for places where they might have met. Make sure each student has a chance to make an introduction.
- Move around the room and help students as needed.
   If necessary, remind students that small talk is conversation about minor topics.
- Make sure students change roles and start a new conversation at least once.

Option: [+10 minutes] To expand the activity, ask groups to perform their introductions. Have the rest of the class write down the body language they observe. To demonstrate, write Student A stood very close to Student B. Student B moved his hands around a lot. Student A smiled and looked friendly. After each introduction, ask Was the person introduced using a first or last name? How did the people greet one another?

Option: [+10 minutes] To challenge students, have pairs role-play introductions using the language in the Photo Story on page 3. Point out that each man introduces himself because there isn't a third person to make the introduction. The men get reacquainted when they recognize each other.

• To introduce the use of yet and already, write the first two examples from the Grammar box on the board. Underline yet and circle already in the questions. Ask a student to read aloud the first rule and examples while you point out the placement of yet at the end of the sentence and already before the past participle. Stress that each question is about activities a person has done a short time ago.

- Have a student read aloud the second rule and the two

  yet. Have students answer in the affirmative or negative using yet or already; for example, Have you seen this movie yet? (Yes, I have already seen it. No, I haven't seen it yet.).
- Write on the board the examples under the third rule. Explain that before means before now and refers to an indefinite time in the past. Point out that ever is placed before the past participle, and before is placed at the end of the sentence. Point out that ever and before can be used in the same sentence: Have you ever been to London before? Then have students read the Be careful! note.
- Explain that yet, already, and ever are optional. They emphasize the lack of a specific time reference.
- Read the fourth rule to students. Have students underline the affirmative statements. (I've already tried

Discuss gestures and customs

BEFORE YOU READ

Pair work Discuss which hand gestures people use in your country for the expressions below. Are there any other gestures you can think of that people often use?

READING

Body Talk

By Kelly Garbo

To communicate well with people of other countries, you must learn to speak well, right? Yes, but speaking isn't everything. Some experts say only thirty percent of communication comes from talking. Your gestures and other non-verbal actions matter, too.

But in different cultures, the same action can have different meanings. When you have to meet someone

Let's look at shaking hands. North Americans like a firm handshake. But the French prefer a light, short handshake. If you shake a French person's hand the North American way, he or she may not like it. People in Eastern European countries and some Latino cultures prefer shorter handshakes, too. Hugging after shaking hands is also a common introduction there. Don't be surprised if a Brazilian gives you a hug. If you misinterpret gestures of introduction, your friendship may get off on the wrong foot!

Everyone around the world knows the "OK" hand gesture don't they? But in Spain, parts of South America, and Eastern Europe, the OK sign is considered rude. And if you go shopping in Japan, it means you'd like your change in coins instead of bills. In France, making the OK sign means "zero" or that something is worthless. So check before you use the OK sign to be sure it's OK!

Understanding even a few key gestures from different cultures can make you a better communicator. So next time you travel, try being culturally sensitive. Find out the local gesture and let your body talk.

Pair work

Suggested	5	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- To introduce the topic, call on students to read the captions. Ask Which of these gestures do people use in this (your) country? Are any of these gestures considered rude? What other gestures do people use in these situations?
- Ask students to imitate the gestures they are comfortable with and to demonstrate additional gestures people use in their country and say what they mean. (Possible responses: shrugging shoulders: I don't know; raising eyebrows: I don't believe you; waving: hello or good-bye)

Language and culture

• In many European countries, Come with me is gestured palm up, but in many cultures this is considered rude and it is done palm down. In some Asian cultures, an open palm is preferred for indicating a third person. In Chinese culture, there are gestures for the numbers 6 through 10 using one hand.

Suggested	12-17	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Before students read, write on the board body +alk and ask students what they think it means. (Gestures and other non-verbal communication.) Explain to students that the term body language has the same meaning.
- Have students read the article. Then have students read the article again and underline the different gestures mentioned (handshake, hug, "OK" hand gesture).
- Ask How are gestures different from speech? Do you think gestures can be more powerful than words? Give examples. (Possible responses: Gestures express meaning without words. Some gestures can be understood between people who speak different languages. Some gestures can make people feel friendlier, angrier, or more interested.) Have students form small groups to share their opinions.
- Tell students to shake hands with a partner and note the type of handshake; for example, firm, light, short. Have students describe each other's handshakes to the class.

CONVERSATION 4 [F = Spanish]

F: Welcome to Mexico City! Is it your first time?

M: Yes.

F: When did you arrive?

M: Last week. I've done so much, but for me the best was climbing the Pyramid of the Sun.

F: When did you do that?

M: Yesterday. It was incredible.

CONVERSATION 5 [M = Chinese]

M: Welcome to Beijing! Have you been to China before?

F: Well, I've been to Shanghai and Hong Kong. But this is my first time to Beijing.

M: Have you taken a tour of the Forbidden City?

F: No, not yet. But I plan to.

M: Oh, you really should! It's amazing.

A Identify supporting details

Suggested 3–5 Your actual teaching time: minutes teaching time:

- Review the answers with the class. Have a student read a statement, say if it is true, and explain why by giving an example from the text.
- Write get off on the wrong foot on the board. Ask Can anyone explain what this means? Tell students to scan the article for this expression and underline it (last sentence of the third paragraph). Have pairs focus on the context to figure out the meaning of the expression. Then have students share ideas with the class. Explain that to get off on the wrong foot means to make a bad start.
- Model the use of this expression by saying We got off on the wrong foot when I arrived late for the job interview.
   Then tell students to think of different situations in which this expression can be used.

Option: [+10 minutes] To challenge students, ask pairs to create three additional true / false statements using the information in the text. Tell students not to include the answers. Combine pairs into groups of four and have them exchange statements. Have students support their answers by giving an example from the text.

- As pairs do the activity, walk around the room, encouraging them to analyze the topic further by answering the questions. Help students as needed.

Option: [+5 minutes] To extend the activity, tell groups to write rules for another topic.

Language and culture

•In English-speaking countries, when children greet adults they don't know, they look them in the eye and say hello. They may also shake hands. Depending on the formality of the relationship, children call adults by their title and last name (Mr. Anderson) or just by their first name (John).

INTERVIEW 1 [F = U.S. regional]

- M: This is Nick Krakauer, and you're listening to World Reflections. We're talking today with Nancy Sullivan from Minneapolis in the United States. Hi, Nancy.
- F: Hi. Nick.
- M: So, Nancy, I understand you're a real traveler—that you've visited over twenty-five countries around the world.
- F: That's right
- M: Tell us some of the places you've been to.
- F: Well, I've been to countries all over . . . North and South America, Europe, Asia . . .
- M: What have been the most fascinating places for you to visit?
- F: Hmmm... Well, I like visiting countries where the culture is really different from my own. That's what I find most interesting. Different body language, different foods...you know.
- M: You told me earlier you've been to India. What was that like?
- F: Oh, India is fantastic.
- M: And what was so different about it?
- F: Well for one thing, when people say "yes," they shake their heads from side to side instead of up and down, like I do.

INTERVIEW 2 [M2 = Australian English]

- M1: Nick Krakauer here, hosting World Reflections. Today's guest is Andrew Barlow from Perth, Australia. G'day, mate!
- M2: G'day to you.
- M1: So, Andrew, I understand you've been a teacher overseas, is that correct?
- M2: I have been, yes.
- M1: And I understand you have an interesting story about something you ate once in one of those countries.
- M2: That's right.
- M1: Tell us about it.
- M2: Well, this happened when I got my first teaching job in a very small village. The people in the village wanted to thank me for coming, so they prepared a meal with a lot of really delicious dishes.
- M1: That must have been nice.
- M2: It was. But there was one thing that I thought was kind of, well, disgusting. They had these tiny little fish that were still alive . . . they were moving on the plate.
- M1: Whoa!
- M2: Yeah. You're supposed to put one in your mouth and swallow it whole.
- M1: Oh, boy!
- M2: Look, I was their guest and I didn't want to be impolite, so I tried one. But I could feel it moving as it went down into my stomach. I tried a few, to be nice. But I just didn't know how to say "thanks, but no thanks" without being rude.

Catch Me if You Can

Revolutionary Road

Blood Diamond

Leonardo DiCaprio stars as an ex-criminal involved in the violent diamond trade during the 1999 civil war in Sierra Leone. He joins with a fisherman (Diimon Hounsou) in a common goal: to recover a pink diamond that can change both their lives. Jennifer Connelly plays a journalist reporting on the war. An exciting yet touching story. (2006)

Based on a 1960s true story. Catch Me if You Can follows the hilarious life of a teenage con artist (DiCaprio) who pretends to be a pilot, a doctor, and a lawyer. Directed by Steven Spielberg, the movie masterfully develops the teenager's relationship with the FBI agent (Tom Hanks) who is trying to catch him. (2002)

Titanic

This 1997 blockbuster disaster movie is less the true story of the ill-fated ocean liner Titanic than a 194-minute romantic story. Rose (Kate Winslet), a wealthy but unhappy bride-to-be, falls for Jack (DiCaprio), a poor artist who gives her life meaning. The scenes of the sinking of the magnificent Titanic are truly frightening. A romantic epic! (1997)

• Preview the photos and ask these questions: Where are the people? (In a movie theater.)

What titles of movies can you see in the background?
Ask students if they can guess the full title of the last movie. If they can't, inform them that it's Casablanca, a movie classic from 1942. See culture note for more information on the movie.

Have you seen any of these movies? If yes, what were they about? If not, what do you think they are about?

 After students read and listen to the conversation, check comprehension. Ask:

Does Anna like violent movies? (No, she can't take all the fighting.)

Does Peter like animated movies? (No, he can't stand them.)

What movie do Peter and Anna agree on? (Casablanca.)

 As students read and listen to the conversation a second time, have them underline any vocabulary they need help with, Explain as needed.

Language and culture

- Classic or a classic is often used for a movie, book, song, or other work that is well known and has been considered for a long time to be of very high quality. For example, Casablanca is a classic film from 1942. The movie won numerous awards and is one of the most popular films of all time.
- The expression A blg [DiCaprio] fan can also be stated A big fan of [DiCaprio]. The word fan is used to talk about celebrities, sports, or other hobbies.
- It is very common in spoken English to say you are (not) in the mood for [something] or (not) in the mood to do [something].
- The pronoun they can be used to refer to people in general rather than a specific group of people. This usage is common in spoken English when someone is giving a popular opinion about something.
- Make sure that students understand these terms:
   Nope is a very informal way of saying "no."

I just can't take [something] means I can't handle it or I can't cope with it.

Now you're talking is an informal expression meaning I agree with you.

It's a deal means we've come to an agreement [on what to do].

When someone offers to pay for something such as food or drinks, he or she will often say It's my treat or It's on me.

GOAL

Apologize for being late

GRAMMAR

The present perfect: for and since; Other uses

Use since with a specific time or date in the past. Use for to describe a period of time.

How long have you been here?

I've been here since eight o'clock. (a time in the past) I've been here for ten minutes. (a period of time)

GRAMMAR BOOSTER > p. 123

- The present perfect continuous: unfinished actions
- Spelling rules for the present participle: review, common errors

Other uses:

- with always: I've always wanted to see Car Planet.
- with ordinals, superlatives, only:
   This is the third time I've seen Ping Pong.
   It's the best movie I've ever seen.
   My husband has only seen it once.
- with lately, recently, just:
   Have you seen a good movie recently?
   I've just seen The Beach—what a great movie!
- with still, so far: You still haven't seen Tomato Babies? I've seen it three times so far!

A Grammar practice Choose the correct words to complete the paragraph.

I've been a big fan of Angelina Jolie (1 (for / since) more than fifteen years. I've followed her career (2 (since) / so far) I was in high school. That means I've watched every movie she's made (3 for / since) 1995, except for The Bone Collector. I (4 yet /(still) haven't seen that one, but I plan to see it soon. I've (5 still /(always) loved Angelina's work. I've (6 since /(always) been the first person in line at the theater when her movies open. Of the movies Angelina has made (7 (ately) / always), the most interesting to me is The Tourist. I think it's the (8 (best) / still) movie she's made (9 (so far) / still). I've (10 always /(already) seen it five times!

- B Pair work Take turns asking and answering the following questions. Use the present perfect in all your answers.
  - 1 Is there a movie you've always wanted to see?
  - 2 Have you seen any good movies recently?
  - 3 What's the best movie you've ever seen?
- 4 What's the worst movie you've ever seen?
- 5 How many movies have you seen so far this month?
- 6 Have you ever seen a movie more than once?

- Have a student write the examples on the board. Circle since eight o'clock and for ten minutes. Point out that we use since + present perfect to talk about a specific start time or date in the past, and we use for + present perfect to describe a period of time that started in the past.
- Model the use of since and for by having a student ask you How long have you been here? Respond I've been here since 3:00. OR I've been here for six hours.
- Write on the board since 3:00, since this morning, since I was a child, for six hours, for two days, for five months, for a long time. Ask students to create additional sentences using these phrases. Make sure students use the present perfect + since or for.
- Read "Other uses" and example sentences. Ask students for examples of ordinal numbers (first, second, eighteenth) and the superlative (the nicest, the oldest, the strangest) and write these on the board.
- · Point out the placement of the underlined words:
- o always, only, just come between have + past participle.
- lately, recently come at the end of a sentence in the present perfect.
- still comes at the beginning of a sentence before have + past participle.
- so far comes at the beginning of a sentence before have past participle OR at the end of a sentence in the present perfect.
- · Review the placement of already and yet:
- already comes between have + past participle or at the end of a sentence in the present perfect.
- o yet comes at the end of a sentence in the present perfect.
- To explain usage, ask questions and have students respond with the present perfect. For example: Have you always wanted to see Car Planet? Have you seen Ping Pong before?
  Have you seen a good movie lately? Encourage students to use the example answers or their own answers.

Language and culture

 When still is used in negative sentences, it shows surprise that a situation has continued; for example, You still haven't seen Avatar? means I'm very surprised that you haven't seen Avatar yet.

From the Longman Corpus: It is common for English learners across all language backgrounds to confuse since and for. For example, I have stayed here since one week.

Which item asks about a preference? (5. Would you like.)
Which items begin by saying what I want to do? (1. I'd love to; 2. I'm in the mood for.)

- Introduce the conversation by having students look at the picture. Ask Where are the two men? (In a movie rental store.) What do you think they are talking about? (Which movie to rent.)
- After students read and listen, have them look at the various expressions for describing preferences and read the expressions silently. Ask Which expressions do you use to make a positive statement? Negative? Neutral?
- Explain that I'm not that big on is another way of saying I don't particularly like.
- Play the conversation again. Then ask students comprehension questions. For example:

Language and culture

- · At the edge of my seat is a positive idiom meaning feeling anticipation. It literally refers to not being able to sit in a calm and relaxed manner while something exciting or scary is happening.
- Exaggeration is often used for emphasis in spoken English. For example, when Rebecca says that she's just seen Casablanca for the hundredth time, she is exaggerating a bit. # AUDIOSCRIPT for page T20 (Listening Comprehension)

Good evening, movie lovers. This is Cinema Sid with quickie reviews and recommendations. Here are some of this week's openings.

First up is Popcom, a new comedy starring David Bodine and Judy Crabbe. Unfortunately, Popcom is a complete waste of time. The acting is terrible. The story's not at all interesting—as a matter of fact, I can't remember much about it-except that it was very strange. And for a movie that's supposed to be funny, it's not. You'll cry, not laugh, at spending your money on this silly, unfunny comedy but with the usually very funny David Bodine.

Our next film, The Vacation, is a well-acted and serious drama. Gene Wildman and Amy Collins play a couple who meet and fall in love, then travel to Rwanda on an innocent vacation. War breaks out and you don't know 'tll the end if they'll manage to get on the last plane to leave. An intelligent and interesting story. I highly recommend this wonderful film. There's some blood, so if you can't stand fighting or killing—it is a war film, after all—don't see it. But if you like a good story you won't forget, this one's for you.

Also reviewed this week is Aquamundo. Aquamundo is no science fiction film; it's based on real scientific research. Filmmaker Hans Schmerling shows the many medical uses of water around the world. From the underwater births of the Sheldrake Islanders to the water cures in Swiss hospitals. Schmerling illustrates how water can heal the world. While many people may think it's a silly idea, the film argues that it can actually happen. It makes you think about the importance of water. A beautiful film. Don't miss it.

Finally, our last film this week is Wolf Babies. Whatever you do, don't take the kids to see this movie! They won't sleep for a week after they see this terrible story about human children captured by wolves. After they capture the children, the wolves take them into the woods and change them forever. Then, when the children return to their families, they hunt younger children and capture them for the wolves. Adults will find the story stupid, but children won't forget these bloody, scary scenes for a long time.

NOW YOU CAN Describe and recommend movies

A Pair work Read the short movie reviews and choose the movie you think sounds the most interesting. Then compare movie choices. Explain your reasons.

WHAT'S YOUR ALL-TIME FAVORITE MOVIE?

I've just seen Casablanca for the hundredth time, at least. It's the most romantic movie in the world, and there's no movie I would rather see, Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman star as people who meet after many years again. They still have feelings for each other and have to make some difficult choices. The ending is unforgettable and always makes me cry. This movie was made in 1942, but it's always "new." I guess that's what makes it a classic.

Wow! I've just seen Phantom of the Opera. I once saw the musical on stage, but it really comes alive on screen. The Andrew Lloyd Webber music is stunningly beautiful. and the tragic romance story is always unforgettable. This musical isn't for everybody. Some people find the story kind of weird, but I love it.

The Hunt for Red October, starring Alec Baldwin and Sean Connery, is one of my all-time favorites. It was made in 1990, so it's a little dated now, but it's still one of the most exciting action movies ever made. This fast-paced thriller kept me on the edge of my seat from beginning to end. I hope you go to see this movie, so I don't want to give away the plot, but the movie is about a Soviet nuclear submarine that comes very close to American waters. The crew of an American submarine must decide: Is the submarine trying to escape the Soviet Union-or start a nuclear war?

I've just seen Tootsie. What a great movie-perhaps one of the most hilarious romantic comedies of all time. Dustin Hoffman stars as outof-work actor Michael Dorsev, who dresses as a woman to get a part on a TV soap opera. But complications arise when he starts falling for his co-star. Jessica Lange, who doesn't know Michael is a man. If you want a good laugh, be sure to see this film!

GOAL

Discuss effects of violence on viewers

BEFORE YOU READ

Warm up At what age do you think it's safe to permit children to see violent movies and TV shows? Explain.

READING

A number of scientific studies have reported that watching violence can make children more aggressive. According to the research, two kinds of programs and movies encourage aggressive behavior in young children more than others: (1) realistic violent action programs and movies and (2) violent cartoons.

One disturbing conclusion is that the effects of violent viewing last for many years. One study showed that children who watched violent TV programs when they were 8 years old were more likely to behave aggressively at age 18. Furthermore, as adults they were more likely to be convicted of violent crimes, such as child abuse and murder.

Studies have also demonstrated that watching violent movies and TV shows can affect children's attitudes towards violence in the world around them. Children who watch a lot of violence become less sensitive to it in the real world. If children find violence normal, they may accept more violence in society or even commit violent acts themselves.

Very often, characters in movies and on television who commit violent crimes are not sorry for their actions and don't face consequences or punishment. When children see fictional characters like these, they learn that doing bad things is OK. For children, who are growing and developing, this is a bad message.

So what can we do? With young children, we have the power to control the TV programs and movies they watch, so we can protect them from seeing any violence at all. However, with older children it's impossible to completely prevent their exposure to violence. But we can try to limit the number of hours they spend watching it. And when children have seen a violent film or TV show, it's important to discuss it with them, to help them understand that violence is not a normal part of life.

- M: Hmmm. Follow . . . Me . . . to . . . Rio . . . Oh, here. "Wonderful love story. Very romantic." How about that?
- F: Hmmm. I'm not sure. What do they say about Streets of Saigon?
- M: "This weird movie starts out as a police drama but, incredibly, ends up as an animated children's film." Sounds too weird for me. Let's forget that one. Here. This sounds great. Clouds Over Mount Fuji. "Unforgettable."
- F: I don't know. I saw the trailer. It doesn't sound that interesting to me. What else is there?
- M: Hamlet, the Musical. Have you heard about that one? It's a musical of the farnous Shakespeare tragedy. What do you think of that?
- F: Not much, actually. Sounds really silly.
- M: Well, what about Inside the Sahara? I think that's a documentary—your favorite, right?
- F: Isn't that a Matson film? I don't think that's a documentary. His films are always very violent. Yeah—look here at the review. "Only for the brave. Very violent. Children under seventeen not admitted." That's not for me.
- M: Well, that leaves only one other film: that comedy Fracas in Caracas, which we've already seen. I'd rather not see it again, would you?
- F: Actually, no. It was pretty funny, but once is enough. It wasn't the best thing I've ever seen, anyway.
- M: Well, it sounds like Follow Me to Rio is it. How about you follow me to the movies!
- F: Deal!

Language and culture

- A trailer is a movie preview that is shown in movie theaters before the full-length film. It's a short advertisement that includes scenes from the movie and is designed to make viewers want to see it.
- A fracas is a noisy fight. This term usually appears in writing and is rarely used in spoken English.

Option: [+10 minutes] To extend the activity with speaking practice, have students work in small groups to discuss which movie they would choose to see. Encourage them to give reasons; for example, I'd choose to see Streets of Saigon. I like police dramas and animation, and I really love weird movies.

- Refer students to the list of movie genres on page 18 and the list of adjectives to describe movies on page 20.
- Walk around the room as pairs work. Provide help as needed.
- As a class, have groups share their ideas about the movies.

Possible responses ...

Cult of Blood is a horror movie. It's about a group of teens on vacation in Texas. People in their group die. It's pretty violent. The movie stars Kristen Stewart, Robert Pattinson, and Jackie Earle Haley.

Ticket to the Moon is an animated movie about some dogs that fly to the moon. It's a comedy. We chose Steve Carell and Cameron Diaz to star in this movie.

- A: I love a good science-fiction movie. How much do I owe?
- B: Nothing. It's on me.
- A: Thanks. Next time it's my treat.
- A: Do you want to see Ticket to the Moon?
- B: Actually, I'd rather not. The reviews were terrible.
- A: How about Cult of Blood at 9:00?
- B: OK. I like horror films. They say this one is very good.
- A: So, what did you think of the movie?
- B: Actually, not much. It was too weird.
- A: I thought it was great.
- B: Yes, but you like sci-fi films. I don't.
- A: Well, that's what makes the world go 'round.
- A: Which would you rather see—Ticket to the Moon or Love in Paradise? It doesn't matter to me.
- B: Well, I've already seen Ticket to the Moon.
- A: I just hope Love in Paradise Isn't silly.
- B: My friend said it was the best romantic drama she's ever

- For a warm-up, ask Do you know names of hotel chains? (Hilton, Intercontinental, Marriott, etc.)
- Have students skim the list of hotel services. Explain vocabulary as needed. For example, a concierge is a person who provides special services such as booking tours or making restaurant reservations.
- Ask What are the benefits of making online hotel reservations? (Possible responses: You can access hotel information from anywhere at any time; you can see pictures of the rooms; you can get information about hotel services; you can check availability and make reservations without a phone call.)

FYI: Exercise F on page 27 will cover hotel services in more detail.

Language and culture

- To let someone down means to disappoint someone. For example, We'll never let you down means you will never be disappointed with our services.
- A suite is a group of rooms that connect together.

  the list of words and phrases. Tell students to scan the website for each term and to look at the pictures to help them understand.
- · After students read and listen once, ask:

How many beds are in a single room? (One.) In a double room? (Two.)

Which is bigger, a twin or a queen-size bed? (A queen-size bed.)

Which is smaller, a king-size bed or a rollaway? (A rollaway.)

What type of room do you prefer in a hotel? When is a suite a good choice? (Possible responses:

When the hotel guest needs a meeting room; when the hotel guest wants to work.)

· Have students listen again and repeat.

Language and culture

 A single room can also be called a single, and a double room can be called a double. Beds can also be called a twin (the same as a single), a queen, a king, and a rollaway. A full-size or double bed is larger than a twin and smaller than a queen. Smoking and non-smoking are abbreviations for smoking room and non-smoking room.

Option: [+10 minutes] On the board, write the list of possible hotel guests below. Have students work in pairs to decide the best hotel room features for these guests, using the pictures to help them. Then have students form groups of four and have them share their ideas.

had better

Use had better and the base form of a verb to warn of a possible negative result. It is a stronger form of advice than should.

They'd better make a reservation right away. (The hotel is almost full.) You'd better not check out late. (There is a late-checkout fee.)

Remember: To give a suggestion or advice, use should and the base form of a verb.

You should make reservations right away. She shouldn't forget her passport.

The negative form shouldn't is more common in questions than had better.

We'd better not. There's no time.

GRAMMAR

The future with will Use will or won't and the base form of a verb to talk about future plans.

He will call back tomorrow.

Will she meet us at the restaurant? Will they take a taxi to the hotel?

We won't be able to join you for lunch.

will they want a tan to t

Note: will / won't be able to has the same meaning as can / can't.

We won't be able to join you for lunch. = We can't join you for lunch.

Remember: You can also talk about the future with be going to, the present continuous, or the simple present tense.

I'm going to call again at 4:00.
They're meeting at noon at the hotel.
She arrives on PanAir Flight 24 tomorrow.

Contractions

| will = |1|

she will = she'll they will = they'll

He will not = He won't

CONVERSATION MODEL

A ()) Read and listen . . .

Suggested	2	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

This conversation strategy is implicit in the model:

- Say "Would you like to leave a message?" if someone isn't available.
- Have students look at the pictures. Ask:
   What are the people in the pictures doing? (Talking to each other on the phone.)

What is the woman wearing on her head? (A telephone headset.)

 To check understanding, have students read and listen again and then ask comprehension questions:

Igain and then ask comprehension questions:

What is the name of the caller? (Tim Klein.)

Who is he calling? (Anne Smith.)

Where is he calling her? (At her hotel.)

What message does he leave for her? (He'll meet her at the hotel at 3:00 this afternoon.)

Language and culture

- Another common way to say She's not answering is There's no answer.
- to ring means to phone or to call someone. In North America, ring is usually used by receptionists; call is used more frequently in other situations.
- Is that all? in this situation means is that the entire message?
   Be sure to use rising intonation with this question.

B 🕪 Rhythm and intonation

Suggested	3	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- · Have students repeat each line chorally. Make sure they:
- use rising intonation for Hello? and falling intonation for I'd like to speak to Anne Smith.
- o put stress on Anne Smith and on Tim Klein.
- use rising intonation for Would you like to leave a message? and Is that all?
- Explain to students that rising intonation is especially important with the question Is that all? If the intonation is flat or goes downward, the question can sound rude.

GRAMMAR

Suggested	5-10	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- As you introduce the first grammar rule, highlight that will / won't are used with the base form of a verb.
- Point out to students that the short answer with will, as with other modals, appears without the base form and that in affirmative short answers will is not contracted, but in negative short answers will is contracted. For example:
  - A: Will you be at the party tomorrow?
  - B: Yes, I will. / No, I won't.

 As you read the Remember tip and the example sentences, point out the future time (4:00) used with the present continuous and the future time word (tomorrow) used with the simple present tense.

FYI: Although grammar books often provide clear usage distinctions between the forms above with future meaning, these distinctions are rarely observed in practice. In spoken English, the form that is used often depends on the formality of the conversation.

Language and culture

Can't and won't be able to are often used to soften refusals that would sound harsh if stated directly. For example, I can't / won't be able to meet you for lunch, sounds much more polite than I won't meet you for lunch or I'm not going to meet you for lunch.

teaching time:   m	inutes teac	ning time:

 Have students work in pairs to locate the hotels on the map and circle them. Then tell students to read the names of the tourist attractions. Ask:

Has anyone ever been to New York?
If yes, what tourist attractions did you visit?
If no, what tourist attractions would you like to visit?
Do you think location is important in choosing a hotel?

 Tell students to refer to the ratings they gave the factors in Exercise A (Frame your ideas) as they choose their hotel.

Text-mining: Focus students' attention on the Text-mining box. Ask a student to read the text. Have students skim the article and underline helpful language; for example, as near as it gets, this hotel is a real winner, best of all. Review the answers and write students' findings on the board for them to refer to during the discussion. To help discussion, print out the graphic organizer from the ActiveTeach Multimedia Disc and distribute to students.

 Have pairs discuss the advantages and disadvantages of their choices.

- Write a list of all the hotels on the board. Survey how many students chose each hotel and write the number next to the hotel.
- Ask a volunteer to share his or her choices. Then ask if any other students chose the same hotel. If any did, have them add any other reasons.
- Call on a student who chose a different hotel. Follow the same procedure of asking other students who chose the same hotel to add their comments. Repeat until all students have spoken.

Option: [+5 minutes] Say I would like to stay at a hotel close to the American Museum of Natural History, and I don't want to spend much money. Where should I stay? (The Lucerne, which is very close to the museum, or The Hotel Newton, which is a little farther away and less expensive.) Have students follow the model to state their preferred location and price and to ask where they should stay. Ask students to share their preferences with the class. Based on each student's preference, have the class give suggestions for an appropriate hotel.

Language and culture

 An SUV (sports utility vehicle) is also called a four-wheeldrive vehicle. Four-wheel drive means that all four wheels of the car—not just the two rear or front wheels—get power from the engine. Four-wheel drive makes it easier to get out of mud, sand, or snow and to drive on rough roads.

FYI: Depending on its size, a sedan can be categorized as a compact or full-size car. If a sports car has a roof that opens, it can also be a convertible.

   Does he know how to drive a car with a manual transmission? (Yes.)

What two things does the car rental agent ask for? (Mr. Kijima's driver's license and a major credit card.)
Where will Mr. Kijima return the car? (At the airport.)

 Have students open their books and read and listen to the conversation.

Language and culture

- The renter says The name is Kenji Kijima. This is another way of saying My name is . . . or in this specific case The reservation is under the name . . . The same construction can be used at a hotel when checking in (See Unit 3, page 29 Conversation Model The name's Baker.)
- GPS stands for global positioning system.
- A car with an automatic transmission automatically changes gears according to the speed of the car. A car with a manual transmission (also referred to as a standard transmission or stick shift) has a hand-operated gearshift and a foot-operated clutch with which a driver changes gears. The rental agent says I've got a nice automatic. This is a short way of saying car with automatic transmission.

- To make it clear how to form and use the past continuous, write The car was making a funny sound while they were driving on the board. Underline the verb forms, and explain that the past continuous is formed with the simple past of be and the present participle of the main verb. Read the rule in the Grammar box and the examples. Point out that although we know these things happened in the past, no definite time is given.
- On the board, write She was driving home when she had an accident. Draw this time line:

Explain that the past continuous (was driving) talks about an action that continued in the past. The simple past (had an accident) talks about an action that happened and then ended in the past. Make it clear that the simple past action interrupted the action in the past continuous; it was not finished. Point out that when shows these actions happened at the same time.

GRAMMAR

Direct object placement with phrasal verbs

Phrasal verbs contain a verb and a particle that together have their own meaning.

main verb particle

turn + on = start (a machine)

Many phrasal verbs are separable. This means that a direct object noun can come before or after the particle. Turn on, turn off, pick up, drop off, and fill up are separable.

direct object
I'll drop off the car. OR I'll drop the car off.

Be careful! If the direct object is a pronoun, it must come before the particle.

I'll drop it off. (NOT I'll drop off it.)

Did you fill them up? (NOT Did you fill up them?)

Where will they pick us up? (NOT Where will they pick up us?)

- For a warm-up, write these phrasal verbs on the board: turn on, turn off, pick up, fill up, and drop off. Then mime the action and ask What am I doing? For example, you might mime flipping a light switch on and off. If students are uncertain about the difference, when you flip the switch off, mime finding your way around a dark room.
- Have students listen and repeat as they look at the pictures to understand the different terms.
- To check comprehension, ask What's the opposite of turn on? (Turn off.) What's the opposite of drop off? (Pick up.)
- After students listen and practice, ask:
   What is the person turning on? (The engine.)
   Who is picking up a car—the man or the woman? (The woman.)

• To introduce the concept of phrasal verbs, write turn on, turn off, fill up on the board. Underline the main verbs and circle the particles. Explain that verbs are often combined with prepositions or adverb particles to form phrasal verbs which have their own meaning. Phrasal verbs are very common in spoken English. Write pick up, drop off on the board, and call on volunteers to underline the main verbs and circle the particles.

- After students silently read the first two rules and examples in the Grammar box, write on the board turn on / engine; turn off / engine; pick up / car. With the class, write a sample sentence on the board. Then have students create sentences by placing the direct object noun before the particle and then after the particle. (Turn the engine on, Turn on the engine; Turn the engine off, Turn off the engine; Pick the car up, Pick up the car.) Ask students to write their sentences on the board.
- Call on a student to read the Be careful! note in the Grammar box. Where possible, model the appropriate placement of the pronouns by rewriting the sentences on the board with direct object pronouns. (Turn it on. Turn it off. Pick it up.)

Language and culture

LEN From the Longman Corpus

- Turn on and start mean the same thing. Start is more frequently used with things such as cars and engines, whereas turn on is typically used with car lights, radios, and CD players or with household appliances such as televisions and computers.
- It is common for English learners across all language backgrounds to mistakenly place the direct object pronoun after the participle of phrasal verbs, especially pick up. Make sure students are aware that this is incorrect.

Six Tips for Defensive Driving

We all know that not everyone drives well. Some people tailgate, gesture, weave through traffic, and honk— classic signs of the aggressive driving that causes one third of all car crashes. But more and more people are now talking on the phone, eating, and even watching TV as they drive—examples of the multitasking and inattentive driving that is a growing cause of accidents. Although we can't control the actions of other drivers, the following defensive driving tips can help us reduce the risks caused by our own driving and the bad driving of others.

1 Slow down. Driving too fast for weather or road conditions gives you less time to react to dangers on the road ahead of you. Also, as you increase your speed, your car becomes harder to control and takes longer to come to a stop.

- 2 Follow the "3-second rule." The greatest chance of a collision is in front of you. Maintaining a safe following distance of three seconds behind the car in front of you will give you enough time to react if that car slows or stops suddenly.
- Pay attention to your surroundings. Be aware of where other vehicles are and what is happening on the road. Check your rearview and side-view mirrors frequently. Before changing lanes, always look over your shoulder to check your "blind spots"—areas to the side and rear of your car that aren't visible in your mirrors.
- 4 Signal your intentions early. Use turn signals to let other drivers know what you're going to do before you do it. This helps other drivers understand your plans, so they can make their own defensive driving decisions.
- Expect the unexpected. Assume that other drivers will make mistakes. Plan ahead what you will do if another driver breaks a traffic law or cuts you off. For example, don't assume that a vehicle coming to a stop sign or a red light is going to stop. Be prepared to stop your own car if necessary.
- Other people will drive badly. They're not thinking about you. If you permit them to make you angry, it can affect your own driving and lead to an accident. When other drivers show signs of aggressive driving, just slow down or pull over to let them pass.

BEFORE YOU READ

A >>> Vocabulary

Suggested	3-5	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- For a warm-up, brainstorm what the qualities of a good driver are. (Possible responses: Knows the local driving rules, is in control of the vehicle, functions well under stress, drives well in bad weather conditions, pays attention.)
- Tell students to look at the pictures and ask Are these examples of good driving behavior? What kind of behavior is it? Point out the term Aggressive driving behavior in the subhead. Explain that aggressive means angry or threatening.
- Have students read and listen to the vocabulary, then have them listen and repeat. Answer any questions.

Language and culture

• To cut someone off can also mean to interrupt someone (stop someone from saying something.) For example, She cut me off when I tried to explain what had happened.

Vocabulary Flash Cards

B Warm-up

Suggested	3-6	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- To introduce the topic, have students discuss the questions in small groups.
- · Review answers as a class.

Option: [+3 minutes] To extend the discussion, ask Which of these aggressive driving behaviors have you experienced? Have you ever done any of these things on the road? What was the result?

READING

- Preview the article by reading the title aloud and asking What is this article about? (How to drive defensively.)
   What do you think defensive means here? (To avoid an accident.)
- Look at the picture and ask Is he driving defensively? Why not? (No. He's eating, drinking, and talking on the phone while driving.) Do you ever do any of these things while driving?
- Encourage students to activate their knowledge of the topic by closing their books and using the vocabulary to write four defensive driving tips with a negative imperative of their own. For example, Don't cut off other drivers. Then have them read the article.
- As students read the article, move around the room and provide help with any unfamiliar vocabulary as needed.
- After students have finished reading, ask Did you see any of your tips in the article? Which ones?
- Review the answers with the class.

Language and culture

- To multitask means to do many things at the same time; the prefix multi means many.
- To pull over means to drive your car out of traffic; for example, onto the shoulder of a highway or the curb of a road.
- A worst-case scenario means the worst possible thing that can happen.
- To cut out means to remove, eliminate.
- To take something personally means to believe that actions or words are directed only at you, not other people.

Option: [+10 minutes] For additional practice, have students listen to the audio. Pause at the end of each numbered tip and ask students to summarize each tip.

teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Have students scan the choices to complete each statement. Explain any words students don't know, or refer them to the article to find explanations in context.
- Have students complete the exercise individually.
   Then have them compare answers in pairs. Answer any remaining questions.

Option: [+3 minutes] As an alternative approach, before students circle the correct word or phrase, have them number the paragraphs in the Reading. Tell them to scan the article for the answer to each item in the exercise. Have students write the paragraph number where the answer can be found next to the item and work in pairs to complete the exercise.

Option: [+10 minutes] In pairs, have students look at the tips each of them wrote down before the Reading. Have them choose three tips to add to those in the article. Encourage students to write several sentences for each tip explaining what they mean. Have pairs share their ideas with the class.

B Critical thinking

Suggested	5-7	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Write the question on the board for students to refer to: How can defensive driving help drivers avoid accidents?
- Have students write a list of ideas in pairs. Refer students to page 46 for ideas, if they need help.
- Combine pairs into groups of four to discuss their lists. Move around the room and help students as needed.

Option: [+15 minutes] To challenge students, have a brief debate. On the board, write Should using cell phones while driving, including hands-free devices, be against the law? Divide the class in half to form two groups and assign each group either the negative or affirmative answer. Tell each group to prepare arguments to support or oppose the assigned answer. Allow students to refer to the article for ideas and have groups share their arguments, allowing each side to respond. Write the arguments on the board. Then review the arguments and have students vote on which group made a stronger case.

Language and culture

 Cool as a cucumber is an Idiom that means always calm and in control of one's emotions. This idiom may come from the fact that the inside of a cucumber stays cool even in warm weather.

Option: [+5-10 minutes] To extend the activity, write these questions on the board: Do you think the laws against bad driving are strong enough? Why? How do you think better driving behavior could be encouraged? Have students discuss the questions in small groups and share their answers with the class.

- Ask Why do you think people do the things on your bad drivers list? Have groups discuss. (Possible responses: People are in a hurry so they speed, tailgate, cut off other drivers, and weave through traffic. Because people talk and text on their phones while they drive.)

C Discussion

Suggested	10-12	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

• For a warm-up, say Raise your hand if you think you're a good driver. Raise your hand if you think you're a bad driver. An OK driver. Write the numbers of students in each category on the board. Ask How many of you know someone who is a bad driver? Circle the bad driver numbers.

Note: If your students don't drive yet, you can say Raise your hand if you think you'll be a good driver, a bad driver, or an OK driver.

Text-mining: Review the instructions with the class, then have students skim the article and underline appropriate language. For example, ... is a growing cause of accidents; defensive driving skills can help us avoid ...; slow down or pull over ...; be prepared to act if. Write students' findings on the board for them to refer to during the discussion.

- Have students work in groups to discuss the question in the book. Encourage students to come to an agreement on their conclusion, Assign one student the role of taking notes.

- M: There he goes again. Now he's in the left lane passing another car.
- F: Unbelievable. He thinks he owns the road!
- M: You know what bugs me? There's never a policeman around when people drive like that.
- F: You can say that again!

CONVERSATION 7

- M: Why is that man looking at us like that? He looks so angry.
- F: You're right. He does.
- M: Yeah. But why's he doing that?
- F: He probably doesn't like the way you drive. Don't even look back at him.

 Tell students to give the characters names and create a story about them. Remind students to use the simple past tense for finished actions and the past continuous for actions that continued during a period of time in the past.

Possible responses ...

John and Melissa Green picked up their rental car in Temuco on January 16. They rented an SUV. First they filled up the car with gas. John was not a good driver. Most of the time he was speeding and not paying attention. Melissa was not paying attention because she was talking on her cell phone, and John wasn't watching the road. Then he saw a lot of cows in the road. He had an accident, Luckily, no one was hurt. But there was damage to the car. They will have to replace the headlights and fix the hood and the bumper, Melissa called the rental agency and told them about the accident, Before Exercise A, give students a few minutes of silent time to examine the spa brochure.

Suggested	12-17	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Introduce the topic by writing spa on the board. Ask What kinds of services does a spa offer? Have you or has anyone you know ever been to a spa?
- Check comprehension by asking:
   What is this brochure for? (A hotel spa.)
   Where is it located? (At the Imperial Hotel.)
   Do you need to make an appointment? (You should, but you can also just walk in.) Make sure students understand that Walk-ins welcome means that customers without appointments are welcome.
- Ask a volunteer to read the information at the top of the brochure. Explain relieve stress if necessary.
- Tell students to discuss these questions in pairs: In your opinion, which of these services are the most essential at a spa? Which are the least essential?

A ()) Vocabulary

Suggested	3	Your actual

- After students read and listen once, explain that all of the salon services are count nouns and take an article.
   Point out the difference between a shampoo (a count noun), meaning a salon service, and shampoo (a noncount noun), a personal hair care product.
- Explain that we use the verbs give or get with the salon services. A customer gets the service and the salon worker gives the service.

- Model the activity by having two students complete the task. Ask one student to read the model quote and the other student to answer the question. Tell pairs to use the sample question in quotes as a model for asking questions about salon services.
- Review answers with the class by asking Is there a salon service you would never get? If yes, why?

Suggested	12-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:	1 1000

• To prepare students, tell them to look at the photos and answer these questions:

Why do you think he is in the salon? (To get a haircut.) What does the woman give the man? (A towel. Maybe he's there to get a facial and a haircut.)

- Have students read and listen to the conversation. Make sure students understand the meaning of while I'm at it (while I am doing something else) and I don't have much cash on me (I don't have much cash in my wallet or purse). In this case, the man would have to go and get more cash from a bank or ATM or charge the service to a credit card.
- Have students listen and read a second time. To check comprehension, ask:

What services is he interested in? (A facial and a haircut.)

What time will he get his facial? (11:00, since someone canceled his or her appointment.)
What time can he get a haircut? (12:00.)
Is this salon in Europe? How do you know? (Yes, it's in Europe. The price is quoted in euros.)
How will the man pay? (He doesn't have much cash on him, so it will be charged to his room.)

Language and culture

- At places where appointments are necessary, such as salons, businesses, or doctors' offices, it is common to refer to people by the time of their appointment; for example, Your one o'clock is here. OR Your nine o'clock canceled,
- Would it be possible to... is a way to make a request when the speaker wants a special favor.

Option: [+8 minutes] For an alternative approach before reading the Photo Story, ask students to cover the conversation. Tell them to use the photos to predict what the people are saying.

- Model the activity by doing the first item with the class.
   Then tell students to work individually and underline the phrases in the conversation. Move around the room and explain unfamiliar vocabulary as needed.
- Review the answers as a class and have pairs practice the conversation.

Option: [+5 minutes] Assign pairs one of the expressions they underlined and have them create a two-line conversation using it. For example:

A: I really need a haircut.

B: You're in luck. There's a hair salon in this hotel.

Answers to Exercise D

- 1. Would it be possible to get a facial?
- 2. You're in luck. Our eleven o'clock just called to cancel his appointment.
- 3. Not a problem.
- 4. How much will the facial and haircut come to?
- 5. It will be 110 euros in all.
- 6. You can charge it to your room.
- 7. Well, that's up to you.

E Personalize

Suggested	5-10	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Give students a moment to skim the different services. If necessary, refer them to the previous page to review vocabulary. Then ask students to read the words and phrases and to indicate how often they get the services. Explain as needed: Once in a while means sometimes; too often to count means very often. Point out that the words and phrases are listed from least often to most often.
- Before pairs compare answers, write How often do you get a ___? on the board. Remind students that customers use the verb get to talk about services they receive and that these are countable nouns.

F Pair work

GRAMMAR

Quantifiers for indefinite quantities and amounts

Use some and any with both plural count nouns and non-count nouns.

some: affirmative statements

We bought some combs. Now we have some. They need some soap. We have some.

any: negative statements

I don't have any razors. I don't want any. We don't want any makeup. We don't need any.

some or any: questions

Do you want any aftershave? OR Do you want some aftershave? Does she have any nail files? OR Does she have some nail files?

- Ask a student to read the caption from the first item in each group of products. (A comb, soap.) Ask Which word has an article? (Comb.) Why? Which group does comb belong to? (Count nouns.) Remind students that noncount nouns do not have articles.
- Have students listen and repeat. Make sure they repeat the indefinite articles with the count nouns.
- Check comprehension by having students close their books. Write these products on the board: toothbrush, toothpaste, razor, shaving cream. Ask Which do we use to clean our teeth? To shave our faces or legs? Write on the board a toothbrush and toothpaste, a razor and shaving cream. Emphasize the use of the indefinite article with the two count nouns.

Language and culture

- Soap, toothpaste, and shampoo are non-count nouns, but they often appear in these countable phrases: a bar of soap, a tube of toothpaste, and a bottle of shampoo.
- The term makeup is a category and includes all the items in the picture: lipstick, mascara, eye shadow, face powder, and nail polish.

Option: [+5-7 minutes] For additional practice, play a game. Tell students to look at all the vocabulary items for two minutes and then close their books. Ask them how many of the items they can remember. Have students work in pairs from memory to complete a list of all twenty-two items from the vocabulary. The pair who remembers the most items or completes the list first is the winner.

READING

Cosmetic surgeryfor everyone?

Some people consider cosmetic surgery no more serious than visiting a spa or a salon. But others say, "I think I'll pass." They're aware that cosmetic surgery is, in fact, surgery, and surgery should never be taken lightly. Cosmetic surgeons have made great progress in repairing injuries and damage from burns. But more and more, people with the necessary financial resources have chosen cosmetic surgery to improve appearance. Fitness editor Dr. Gail Weiss answers readers' questions about cosmetic surgery.

Dear Dr. Weiss:

When I was young, I was a chocoholic. I ate a lot of chocolate, but I never gained any weight. Now that I'm older, I can't eat anything without gaining weight! I've heard that liposuction is the answer to an overweight person's dreams. What's up with that?

Dawson

Dear Dawson:

It's true that liposuction can remove fat deposits that don't respond to dieting and exercise, but it's expensive and can be dangerous. It would be a good idea to ask your doctor for some help in dieting first. Then, if you are unsuccessful, be sure to find a surgeon with a lot of experience before deciding on liposuction.

Gail Weiss, M.D.

Dear Dr. Weiss:

I'm a 24-year-old man who is already losing his hair. Dr. Weiss, I'm looking for a wife and I'm afraid no woman will want to marry a 25year-old baldie! I need some advice.

Calvin

Dear Calvin:

There are several surgical procedures which a cosmetic surgeon can perform to help treat hair loss and restore hair for both men and women. But if that's not practical, remember that some of the world's most attractive men are bald!

Gail Weiss, M.D.

Dear Dr. Weiss:

Can anyone help me with my problem? I have too much hair on my body and I'm sick and tired of shaving. It's so embarrassing!

Cassandra

Dear Cassandra:

Before you call a cosmetic surgeon for hair removal, try a depilatory cream.

Depilatories are available in any drugstore, and they remove hair easily and safely in your own home. Why don't you give that a try first?

Gail Weiss, M.D.

BEFORE cosmetic surgery

Dear Dr Weise

I'm at my wits' end with my face. I have wrinkles and sun damage. I'm only 30 but I look 50. Do you think a face-lift is an option for me? Josephine

Dear Josephine:

Both men and women of all ages request this popular and effective surgery. It lifts the face and the neck in one operation and has excellent results. But this is surgery, and afterwards you will have to stay home for a number of days. It takes time to recover. And you may have to do it again after a number of years. Before you decide to have a face-lift, ask your dermatologist or a cosmetic surgeon about a chemical peel. A chemical peel removes the top layer of skin and can improve the appearance of the skin without surgery. Compared to surgery, a half-hour visit to your dermatologist would be a piece of cake! Good luck!

Gail Weiss, M.D.

   Write on the board Cosmetic surgery—for everyone?
   Ask What does the title ask? (Is cosmetic surgery for everyone?) Ask students for their opinions.
- Have students look at the "before" and "after" photos.

  Ask How is the "after" photo different? (The man's nose is straighter.)
- Have students find the source of the article. Ask Do you think this is a reliable source? Why? Why not? (Possible responses: Yes. The organization probably has cosmetic surgeons. / No. They want to encourage more people to get cosmetic surgery.)
- After students have read the article, ask them to list the kinds of cosmetic surgery and procedures the article mentions. (Liposuction, surgery to treat hair loss, hair removal, face-lifts, chemical peels.)

- To check comprehension of the introductory paragraph, ask;
  - How do cosmetic surgeons help people? (They repair injuries and damage from burns.)
  - Why are more and more people turning to cosmetic surgery? (To improve their appearance.)
  - Does cosmetic surgery cost a lot of money? (Yes, it is an expensive choice.)
- To practice getting meaning from context, write on the board: cosmetic surgery, a piece of cake, I think I'll pass, What's up with that?, sick and tired. Have students read the article again and explain the meanings of these phrases from context.
- Move around the room and help students as needed.
- When students have finished reading the full article, review the answers with the class. (Cosmetic surgery is surgery to improve someone's appearance. a piece of cake means something is extremely easy. I think I'll pass is an expression meaning I think I won't do it. What's up with that? is a very informal expression meaning Can you explain that? Sick and tired means very discouraged.)
- Review the main idea with the class. Ask What do you think Dr. Weiss's views are about cosmetic surgery? Does she generally think it's a good idea or a bad idea? (That depends. She suggests that patients be careful and try other procedures first. She also says that patients need to choose a good surgeon.)

Option: [+5-10 minutes] For additional practice, have the class brainstorm natural ways to improve appearance. (Possible responses: Diet, exercise, plenty of sleep, eight glasses of water per day, using sunscreen, not smoking.) Discuss how each tip can contribute to a better appearance and, as a result, avoid the need for cosmetic surgery. For example, Exercise keeps you in good shape. Then you don't need liposuction.

- F1: This is Nigella Compton with the DBC radio network and Eye on the Globe. We're talking to the new Miss World, Maya Prasad, who has just won her title at the tenth annual Miss World beauty pageant in Kuala Lumpur. And we're also talking to Ricardo Figueroa, the chief judge of the contest this year. Welcome, Ms. Prasad—or, should I say, Welcome, Miss World?
- F2: Hello, Nigella. Please call me Maya. Thank you for inviting me.
- F1: And welcome, Mr. Figueroa.
- M: Thank you.
- F1: My pleasure. Maya, please tell our listeners what it's like to have been chosen Miss World. Do you feel like the most beautiful woman in the world?
- F2: Uh...actually, no. To tell you the truth, the idea is very flattering, but I don't actually feel that beautiful. All the other contestants were beautiful. Many, I think, were much more attractive than I am. I think I was very lucky.
- F1: One of the things that's special about the Miss World contest is that it emphasizes both inner and outer beauty.

  Mr. Figueroa, could you say a few words about that for us?
- M: Certainly. The Miss World contest tries to choose contestants who exhibit all the features of traditional physical beauty: youth, health, beautiful skin and hair, a lovely body—those things everyone understands to represent beauty. But true beauty goes beyond that. Helen Keller, who was both blind and deaf, said something very profound and true about beauty: "The best and most beautiful things in the world cannot be seen, nor touched ... but are felt in the heart." We at the Miss World contest have tried to make that our motto. We try to find that beauty that touches our hearts.

- F1: Very interesting. And all the more so since Helen Keller was blind, and couldn't see what people looked like. She still had a concept of beauty. "The most beautiful things are felt in the heart." What, in your opinion, are those things—those beautiful things that we feel in the heart?
- M: Well, I think Helen Keller was describing inner beauty those qualities that last longer than youth and can exist even when health has gone. Qualities such as goodness, kindness to other people, truthfulness—qualities that everyone appreciates, no matter where in the world they live.
- F2: I've always felt that physical beauty can't last forever. People think it's beauty that brings you love, but I'm not so sure. I've always loved the Oscar Hammerstein song that says: "Do you love me because I'm beautiful, or am I beautiful because you love me?"
- F1: Hmm. Very interesting food for thought. I would imagine that that attitude will help you lead a happy life.
- M: I'd like to say that the judges thought that Maya presented an almost perfect balance between outer and inner beauty. Her happiness with life is one of the strongest features of her inner beauty. But before we finish, let me just read a little from their written comments: "Maya has warmth: She expresses her love for others easily, She has patience: She is a wonderful listener and lets others speak. She doesn't rush them."
- F2: Oh, Mr. Figueroa. I can't believe anyone said all this about me. I'm just a regular person!
- M: Maya, that comment shows us that you are also very modest—modesty is actually another of the features of your inner beauty. But let me continue . . . "Maya's also a woman of great goodness and kindness: She spends time helping people who have difficulties. Last year she taught art to children in the public hospital. So her happiness, her warmth, her patience, and her kindness shine through and make her physical beauty all the more radiant."
- F1: Thank you to you both.

- C Discussion Talk about one or more of the following questions.
  - 1 In what ways do you agree or disagree with Prasad's and Figueroa's ideas about beauty?
  - 2 Do you think the Miss World contest sounds better than the usual beauty contest? Why or why not?
  - 3 Do you think there should be beauty contests for men as well as for women? Why or why not? What in your opinion is the difference between a woman's beauty and a man's beauty?
  - 4 How do you explain these words in the song Prasad talks about: "Do you love me because I'm beautiful, or am I beautiful because you love me"?

- B Pair work Discuss the qualities of beauty you found in the people in the pictures. Compare your opinions. Use your notepads for support.

Before beginning Exercise A, give students a few minutes of silent time to examine the food pyramid.

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- For a warm-up and review, ask the class general information questions about food. For example: Is your diet healthy? Do you eat a lot of healthy foods? How many fruits and vegetables do you eat in a day?
- Tell students to look at the food items in the pyramid while volunteers read the labels. Make sure that students know that rarely means not often.
- Point out the Glossary and play the accompanying audio. After students listen to the audio, have them find the words from the glossary on the pyramid. Ask volunteers to read the definitions aloud.
- Tell pairs to name the individual items pictured in the different categories of the pyramid. (Fats, oils, sweets: butter, oil, chocolate/candy; Meat, fish, beans: fish, salami, beans; Dairy: cheese, milk; Fruit: grapes, bananas, lemons, kiwis, melons; Vegetables: carrots, red peppers, eggplant (aubergine), garlic, onions, potatoes, tomatoes; Bread, grains, pasta: bread, rolls, pasta.)
- Explain that the foods and the number of recommended servings in pyramids can vary depending on national dietary habits and current research. Ask Have you seen any other food pyramids? If the answer is yes, ask In these other food pyramids, were the categories the same? Were the sample foods different? What was different? If the answer is no, ask What are some other food categories that could appear on this pyramid? What are other foods that could be examples?
- After students answer the questions, have them work in pairs to discuss foods they never eat. Then have pairs share the foods they never eat with the class.

Language and culture

- Fruit can be both a count and a non-count noun. For example, I eat a lot of fruit (non-count) and I bought many different fruits at the supermarket (types of fruit—count).
- A serving can be measured by volume, by weight, or by the piece (for example, one banana, one slice of bread).
   Serving size depends on the culture. For example, in North America, serving sizes are often larger than they are in Asia.

- For a warm-up, have students list the foods they ate for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks for the past two or three days.
- Refer students to the empty pyramid on the right and tell them to use their list to fill it in. (If students need more space, tell them to copy the pyramid on a separate sheet of paper.) After they have finished, have pairs compare their pyramids.
- Ask the class What category of foods do you eat most—for example, fruits, meat, dairy? Are you surprised by the numbers of different foods you eat?

Option: [+5 minutes] For an alternative approach, have students fill in the diagram with the foods they would ideally like to eat. - Preview the photos by asking Where are the two women? (In a cafeteria / lunchroom / self-service restaurant.)
   In the second picture, what is the woman in the blue shirt doing? (Offering some cake to the woman in the red shirt.) Does the woman in the red shirt want any cake?
   (No.)
- Tell students to close their books and listen to the conversation. Then ask What are the two women talking about? (Dieting, eating chocolate cake.)
- Have students read and listen to the conversation.
   Highlight the fact that rising intonation is used with Want to try some? Point out the word with the asterisk below the conversation. If students need a definition, refer them to the glossary on page 62.
- Check comprehension by asking Has Joy been trying to eat fewer sweets? (Yes.) What is she eating in the picture? (Chocolate cake.) What does Rita ask about the cake? (How many calories does it have?) Does Rita eat some cake? (Yes.) How much does she eat? (A bite.)
- Make sure students understand that You only live once means take advantage of opportunities and enjoy the pleasures of life now because it's your only opportunity to live.

Language and culture

 In informal spoken English, questions are often reduced.
 For example, Want to try some? is a reduced form of the question Do you want to try some cake? In reduced questions, the auxiliary verb and the subject are omitted and the question is formed by intonation.

Option: [+3-5 minutes] To personalize the activity, write these questions on the board for group discussion: Have you ever been on a diet? What foods did and didn't you eat? How long did you stay on the diet? Was it successful?

E Focus on language

- Bring the class together and ask the students their opinions. Then ask Which of these diets does not list disease prevention? (Atkins diet.) Do you think disease prevention is important for a diet?

Option: [+10 minutes] To extend the activity, have pairs choose a diet and create a menu for a couple of days. Then have pairs work with another pair to discuss if they would enjoy following this menu.

Option: [+5-10 minutes] To challenge students, ask In addition to changing eating habits, what else can a person do to lose weight? To gain weight? Divide the class in half and assign each half either weight loss or weight gain. Have the groups discuss ways to lose or gain weight and then present them to the class. (Lose weight: exercise, drink a lot of water, count calories, use more calories than you consume; Gain weight: exercise less, drink a lot of water, count calories, use fewer calories than you consume.)

The High-Fiber Diet

For maintaining better health, preventing disease, and watching weight. Eat anything you want. Be sure to consume 25 to 40 grams of fiber per day from grains, fruits, beans, and vegetables.

The Vegan Diet

For better health and prevention of disease. Avoid all animal products, including dairy and eggs. Eat lots of grains, beans, vegetables, and fruits.

The Atkins Diet

A high-protein, low-carbohydrate weight-loss diet. Eat foods such as meat, eggs, and cheese that are high in protein and fat. Avoid foods that are high in carbohydrates, such as starchy vegetables, bread, grains, sugar, and dairy products (except cheese, cream, and butter).

The Low-Fat Diet

For weight loss and the prevention of disease. Cut back fat to 20 to 30 percent of daily calories, Limit cholesterol in food to less than 300 mg per day (about the amount in one large egg).

GRAMMAR

Use to / used to

Be careful!

They used to ... BUT

They didn't use to ... Did they use to ...

Use use to and used to and the base form of a verb for habitual actions in the past that no longer occur.

I used to be crazy about candy, but now I don't care for it.
She didn't use to eat cheese, but now she has it all the time.

Did you use to eat a lot of fatty foods?

Yes, I did. No, I didn't. OR Yes, I used to. No, I didn't use to.

What did you use to have for breakfast? Eggs and sausage. But not anymore. Why did you use to eat so much? Because I didn't use to worry about my health.

  such as I'm really crazy about chocolate. I love it!
- After students listen to the audio and repeat, ask Which person likes a lot of different foods? (The man.) Which person doesn't like a lot of foods? (The woman.)
- Point out that the positive ways of expressing food passions are on the left. Those on the right are negative, in varying degrees. I can't stand is stronger than the three other negative statements.

Language and culture

- An addict usually means someone who is dependent on drugs or alcohol. In this context, it means having an extremely strong passion for something.
- A person who is very choosy about food and will not try any new food is known as a picky eater.

use the negative in expressions such as I can't stand..., I don't care for..., or I'm not much of a.... They never say I stand..., I care for..., or I'm much of a... when referring to food or things they like.

- Before students listen, have them look at the pictures and read the names of the foods. Ask individuals How do you feel about these foods? Encourage students to use the vocabulary in Exercise A in their answers.
- While students listen to the audio, tell them to write down key words that suggest whether each speaker likes or doesn't like the food. Make sure students listen for each speaker's opinion. (1. biggest passion, sushi addict; 2. I really don't care for it, doesn't agree with me, can't look at it; 3. big mango eater, mmm; 4. I don't touch it, not much of a pasta lover; 5. I like it too much, think about it all the time.)
- Have students complete the exercise. If necessary, let them listen again before checking answers in pairs.

AUDIOSCRIPT

- 1 [F = Portuguese]
- F: My biggest passion is sushi. I'm definitely a sushi addict. I have it, oh, probably twice a week. There's a terrific restaurant around the corner from where I live in Rio. And they make amazing sushi.

- 2
- M: My wife is crazy about asparagus, but I really don't care for it. I don't know why. It just doesn't agree with me. I can't even look at it.
- 3
- F: When I was a kid, I didn't use to like them. I thought they tasted funny. But now, I've turned into a big mango eater. There's really nothing quite like slices of fresh mango. Mmm.
- 4 [M = Spanish]
- M: My family loves pasta. We have it several times a week, but I don't touch it. The truth is, we just have it TOO much—with tomato sauce, pesto sauce, garlic and oil—you name it. I'll eat anything, but I'm really not much of a pasta lover.
- 5 [F = Chinese]
- F: The problem with ice cream is I like it too much. When I'm on a diet, I can't eat it. But that doesn't mean I don't think about it all the time. I do.

- Review the usage information and the example statements in the Grammar box. Explain that the second half of each example contradicts the information in the first part of the statement.
- Ask How does the form of used to differ in the first two example sentences? Point out that used to becomes didn't use to in the negative; the d disappears because didn't is in the simple past.
- Shift attention to the example questions in the Grammar box. Read the exchanges, then ask How does the form of used to change in a question? (Used to becomes use to.) Point out that the auxiliary did is always followed by a base form in questions and negatives. Use to is the base form.
- Model the pronunciation of used to /ustə/ and use to /ustə/. Point out that the d is elided, and so the pronunciation of both forms is the same.

Asks a yes / no question; 2. Asks a negative yes / no question to check information that the speaker thinks is true. The speaker thinks Tanya is allergic to nuts.)
- Review the first rule in the Grammar box with the class.
   Read the first bullet point and examples in the Grammar box. Point out that a negative yes / no question can be answered affirmatively or negatively. Give alternative answers; for example, No, she isn't. No, he didn't.
- Write additional negative yes / no questions on the board that check information the class thinks is true about you. For example, Aren't you a teacher? Don't you have children? Tell pairs to ask each other negative yes / no questions to check information they think is true.
- After reading the second and third bullet points and their examples, have students suggest additional questions. For example, Wasn't the homework difficult? Don't you love that new TV show? Aren't you going to give us homework? Isn't there a quiz today? Have students respond with short answers.
- Ask a student to read the second rule and example sentences in the Grammar box. Write on the board Why don't we end class early today? Point out that this sentence makes a suggestion. Ask What's another way to make the same suggestion? (Possible responses: Let's end class early today. How about ending class early today?)
- Write Why don't ...? on the board as a model and invite students to make suggestions to each other.

How Can It Be? Americans Gain Weight, While the French Stay Thin

Have you ever wondered why Americans struggle with watching their weight, while the French, who consume all that rich food - the bread, the cheese, the drinks, and the heavy sauces - continue to stay thin? Now a report from Cornell University suggests a possible answer. A study of almost 300 participants from France and the U.S.

provides clues about how lifestyle and decisions about eating may affect weight. Researchers concluded that the French tend to stop eating when they feel full. However, Americans tend to stop when their plate is completely empty or they have reached the end of their favorite TV show. As a matter of fact, Americans are taught from an early age to "clean their plates" because children in poorer countries "are going hungry."

According to Dr. Joseph Mercola, who writes extensively about health issues, the French see eating as an important part of their lifestyle. They enjoy food and therefore spend a fairly long time at the table. In contrast, Americans see eating as something to do quickly as they squeeze meals between the other activities of the day. Mercola believes Americans have lost the ability to sense when they are actually full. So they keep eating long after the French would have stopped. In addition, he points out that Americans drive their cars to huge supermarkets to buy canned and frozen foods for the week, while the French tend to shop daily, walking to small shops and farmers' markets where they have a choice of fresh fruits, vegetables, and eggs as well as high-quality meats and cheeses for each meal.

Mireille Guiliano, author of French Women Don't Get Fat, decided to write about the subject after discovering she had gained weight after a visit to the U.S. Rather than suggesting how to avoid food, she writes about the importance of "restraint" - knowing when to stop. Today she continues to stay slim. And she rarely goes to the gym.

Despite all these differences, new reports show that recent lifestyle changes may be affecting French eating habits. Today the rate of obesity - or extreme overweight-among adults is only 6%. However, as American fast-food restaurants gain acceptance and the young turn their backs on older traditions, the obesity rate among French children has reached 17% - and is growing.

4) Research has shown that looking at pink can cause people to feel tired. Some sports teams have painted the dressing room of the opposing team pink to reduce the players' energy. 5) Researchers in marketing have found that using blue in processed foods is unappealing. They believe that this is because blue is rare in nature. Painting a restaurant red, on the other hand, increases the appetite. Many restaurants are painted red.

1) Experts say red attracts the most attention. Using red for traffic lights and warning lights makes them more noticeable.

2) Studies have shown that being in a yellow room makes it more likely for adults to lose their tempers and for babies to cry.

3) Green is the easiest color on the eye, and it causes people to relax. Painting a hospital room green helps patients get the rest they need.

Gerunds and infinitives as direct objects

Gerunds and infinitives come from verb forms but function as nouns. A gerund or an infinitive can be a direct object of a verb.

Gerund = an -ing form of a verb

She enjoys painting.

Infinitive = to + a base form

He wants to paint the kitchen yellow.

Use a gerund after the following verbs: avoid, can't stand, discuss, dislike, don't mind, enjoy, feel like, practice, quit, suggest

Use an infinitive after the following verbs: agree, be sure, choose, decide, expect. hope, learn, need, plan, seem, want, wish, would like

Other verbs can be followed by either a gerund or an infinitive: begin, continue, hate, like, love, prefer, start

- To introduce the grammar point, write on the board I'd like to repaint the kitchen I don't mind repainting it. Be sure to underline the infinitive and the gerund.
- Ask a student to read the sentences on the board. Then ask another student to give the subject and verb in each sentence. (I, would like; I, don't mind.) Explain that infinitives and gerunds are used after certain verbs such as like and don't mind.
- Review the first point in the Grammar box. Then ask a student to read the example sentence using a gerund in the Grammar box. Have another student read the example sentence using an infinitive.
- Ask What's the subject and verb in each example sentence? (She, enjoys; He, wants.) What are the verb tenses in the example sentences? (Simple present tense.) Repeat that the verb in She enjoys painting is enjoys, and that painting functions as a direct object noun. Make sure students don't confuse the -ing gerund form with a continuous form. Point out that gerunds and infinitives can be used with verbs in different tenses.
- Make sure that students read and understand the note about other -ing forms. If necessary, refer students to the participial adjectives on page 10.
- Ask volunteers to read the lists of verbs that are followed by gerunds, infinitives, or both.

Option: [+5-8 minutes] To extend the activity, have students review the lists of verbs in the Grammar box and then close their books. Divide the class in half. Call out a verb and have alternating teams decide if the verb is followed by a gerund or an infinitive. For each correct answer, the team gets a point. The team with the most points wins.

Language and culture

whether to follow a verb with a gerund or infinitive is very common among English learners of all language backgrounds. Incorrect sentences such as I enjoy to go camping and I'd like going to the seaside are commonplace.

- Have students predict what the conversation will be about, based on the picture. Ask What do you think they're talking about?
- While students read and listen to the conversation, write on the board the same old grind (pronounced /graind/).
   Ask students to find the context clue that explains the meaning of this phrase. (I'm tired of working, too.)
- Tell students to read and listen to the conversation again. Check comprehension by asking: Why is Speaker B down? (He's tired of the same old grind.)

How does Speaker A feel? (He's tired of working, too.)
What do the two men decide to do to cheer up? (Go to a movie.)

Language and culture

 To introduce the grammar point, write on the board She wrote a poem about roses. If necessary, briefly review the function of prepositions. (They are words that specify place, direction, and time.)

- Ask:
  - What is the preposition in the sentence? (About.)
    What is the object of the preposition? (Roses.)
    What are some other prepositions? (On, in, of, with.)
- Write on the board She's excited about writing poems.
  Then ask What is the preposition in the sentence? (About.)
  What is the object of the preposition? (Writing [poems].)
- Explain that because a gerund such as writing functions as a noun, it can be the object of a preposition.
- Read the first point and the example sentences in the Grammar box. Ask:
  - What are the prepositions in the sentences? (Of, with, to.)
  - What are the objects of the prepositions? (Of: flying; with: cooking; to: discussing.)
- Ask a student to read the Be careful! note in the Grammar box.
- Then read the adjective + preposition combinations and verb + preposition combinations in the box. Point out that the best way to learn these combinations is to memorize them.

FYI: Make sure students understand that to in the expression object to is a preposition, and it is followed by a gerund. The to is not part of an infinitive. For example, saying I object to go is incorrect. The correct form is I object to going.

Language and culture

 The expression sick and tired of means exhausted and bored with something. It can be followed by a noun (Nicole is sick and tired of exams.) or a gerund (Nicole is sick and tired of studying for exams.).

Remember, Annie never had a chance to be the "baby." We think that's why she's a little bit of a rebel.

- F2: Well, nothing terrible, but . . . We know that if we're going out, there's going to be an argument with Annie about clothes. I ask her to wear shoes, and she wants to wear sandals. We get dressed up to go to a nice restaurant and she wants to wear jeans. Sometimes we just give in and let her wear what she wants. We hate to keep fighting with her all the time. This would never happen with Brian.

BEFORE YOU READ

Explore your ideas In what way does a parent's behavior affect a child's development?

READING

Personality: from Nature or Nurture?

What is personality? Many people define personality as a person's usual manner or style of behavior. These patterns of behavior tend to be predictable throughout a person's lifetime. Some people are introverts; others are extroverts. Some people have easygoing personalities: they are usually cheerful and calm and able to cope with life's difficulties without much trouble. Their emotions are usually under control: they don't get extremely angry about little things. Others, at the other end of the personality spectrum, are more emotional, experiencing higher highs and lower lows. Most people's personalities, however, don't fall at the extreme ends but rather fall somewhere in-between.

Where do we get our personality? For hundreds of years, psychologists and ordinary people have never stopped debating this fascinating question. Some people think personality develops as a result of the environment—the combination of influences that we learn from, such as our families, our culture, our friends, and our education. The people who believe this theory believe that all babies are born without a personality and that it's the environment that determines, or forms, each child's personality. This school of thought is called the "nurture school."

At the other end of the continuum we find people who believe that personality is determined by "nature," or the characteristics we receive, or "inherit," from our parents biologically, through their genes. These people believe that our personality is not determined by the environment, but rather by genetics, and that each baby is born with a personality.

The "nature-nurture controversy" The nature-nurture controversy is very old. Experimental psychologists have tried to discover which of these two factors, genetics or the environment, is more important in forming our personality. However, it's very difficult, if not impossible, to conduct research on real people with real lives. There's just no way to put people in a laboratory and watch them develop. For this reason, there's no scientific way to settle the nature-nurture controversy. Recently, however, most researchers have come to believe that both the environment AND the genes—nurture and nature—work together and are both important.

Even though the experts have largely discarded the idea that personality development is so black and white, the nature-nurture controversy remains a popular discussion among friends. It seems that everyone has an opinion.

- · For a warm-up, have students look at the picture and describe what they see. (Possible response: A family taking a walk.) Ask students to read the title of the article. Then ask Why do you think this picture goes with the Reading? (Because it's about where your personality comes from.)
- Tell students to discuss the question in the book in pairs. Then have pairs share their ideas with the class.

READING

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

· Ask a student to read the title. Focus on the word Personality. Ask students to work in pairs to answer these questions:

What is your definition of personality? What kind of personality do you have?

· Have students read the first paragraph of the article to themselves. Then ask:

How many of you have an easygoing personality? How many of you have a more emotional personality? Do you sometimes wish you had a different personality? Do you think you can change your personality?

· Have students read the last two paragraphs of the article. Ask:

Which school of thought believes that a baby is born without a personality? (The nurture school.) Which school of thought believes that personality is inherited? (The nature school.) Why is it impossible to settle the nature vs. nurture controversy? (Because you can't put people in a laboratory and watch them develop.)

Do you think nature and nurture both influence a person's personality? In what ways?

Option: [+10 minutes] To challenge students, have them do this activity as a timed reading. Give students a time limit to read each paragraph. When the time is up, tell them to close their books and to answer your questions as a class or in small groups without looking at the article.

Option: [+10 minutes] Have students listen to the audio of the first paragraph. Ask them to summarize what they heard about personality.

- F1: And what about the "baby"? I guess if Annie's seven, Lucy must be six?
- F2: Right.
- F1: Well, you said that Brian and Annie are typical first and middle children. What about Lucy? Is she a typical youngest
- F2: I guess she is. She's pretty independent. Maybe that's because we didn't have as much time for her as the others. Annie was only thirteen months old when Lucy was born, so we were still pretty busy taking care of Annie. We kind of just let Lucy develop on her own. But that definitely had an effect on her personality. Like any kid, she wanted our attention.
- F1: What did she do to get it?
- F2: Well, she learned how to make us laugh. There's nothing Lucy likes more than clowning around and making people laugh. She's the family clown. Everyone loves her.
- F1: Lucy is a lovable kid. Very charming. I smile every time I think
- F2: Sometimes I worry, though, that she's a little bit of a showoff, but they say that many youngest children like to show off. How better to get attention, right?
- F1: Right.
- F2: But I have to tell you-that that doesn't stop her from being a bit of a pain, too. Last week she decided to paint the dining room walls. Thank goodness she only had washable
- F1: Sorry! I shouldn't laugh. Well, they do say the baby is usually the most creative!
- F2: Well, that's our Lucy! But seriously, though, she is creative: piano; children's theater; ballet lessons; all that stuff. She just can't get enough. We just wish she'd grow up a little. It seems like she'll always be "the baby." She drives her older brother and sister crazy with all the attention she gets.
- F1: Well, they say the youngest child has the longest childhood. It looks like all three of your kids are a textbook case on birth
- F2: You can say that again. Well, I've got to be going. This was really fun. Next time, you'll have to have lunch at my place.
- F1: I'll take you up on that. I'll give you a call sometime next week, OK?

□ First-born children are often too critical of themselves.

☑ Children in the same family usually have personalities that are determined by order of birth.

□ Children usually have personalities that are determined by genes.

B ■ Disten for specific information Read the exercise. Then listen to each part of the discussion again separately. Complete the exercise as you listen.

Part 1: Check True or False for each statement.

True False

1	Brian is usually dissatisfied with himself.	$\checkmark$
2	Brian obeys rules.	V
3	Brian does most things well.	1
4	Brian's mother thinks her husband pushed Brian to be successful.		V
5	Brian never liked being with adults when he was growing up.		V

Part 2: Complete each statement by circling the correct information.

- 1 Annie is (the middle child)/ the "baby").
- 2 Annie had (a lot of / only a little) time with her parents before her younger sister was born.
- 3 Annie is jealous of (Brian / Brian and Lucy).
- 4 Annie (breaks)/ obeys) rules.
- 5 Annie is (rebellious and)/ rebellious but not) popular.

Part 3: Circle the answer to each question.

- 1 How old was Annie when Lucy was born? a 13 years
  - (b) 13 months
- 2 What does Lucy like most?

  (a) making other people laugh
  - b laughing at other people

- What did Lucy do to the dining room wall?
  - a She painted it.
  - b She washed it.
- 4 Why does Lucy drive her older siblings crazy?

  a She pays too much attention to them.
  - bOthers pay too much attention to her.

Language and culture

- A show-off is an informal term for a person who likes to exhibit his or her abilities so other people will admire them.
- The term the baby refers to the youngest child in a family. Even an adult can say I am the baby of the family to mean that he or she is the youngest family member.

PART 1

- F1: Would you like some more dessert?
- F2: No, thanks, Linda. Everything was delicious, but I couldn't eat another bite! Thanks so much.
- F1: So, Jeanne, how are your kids doing?
- F2: Well, that depends on which one . . .
- F1: Well, how about the oldest? That's Brian, right? How old is he now?
- F2: He's fifteen. Brian's fine. Brian's always fine. He's doing great at school. I'm sure he'll get into a great university in a couple of years. He's a great kid—works hard, he plays by the rules, and he's successful at almost everything he does. The only thing that sometimes worries me about Brian is that he can be a little too self-critical.
- F1: Self-critical? How so?

- F2: Well, Brian can be pretty hard on himself: no matter how well he does at something, he's not satisfied. He always feels he could do better.
- F1: That's so interesting. Our first, Eric, is like that, too.
- F2: Really?
- F1: You know, I once read this article in one of those popular psychology magazines. It said that first children are often self-critical because parents push them to succeed more than they do with their other children. I don't mean to suggest you did that, and I don't think we did that with Eric, but it's interesting because it's so common. I just wonder why.
- F2: Well, I do think there's some truth to that in our case. Harvey and I were involved in everything Brian did—music lessons, karate lessons, Chinese class on Saturday—we drove him to all his classes. We picked him up after they were over. We always asked him a lot of questions about how he was doing. He probably thought our message to him was that he had to be good at everything. But we were just interested. We didn't actually push him to be good at everything, but he may have thought we expected a lot of him. Kids internalize those messages.
- F1: I imagine that's pretty typical. It's no one's fault.
- F2: And one more thing—if you buy into that—you know— "nurture theory."
- F1: Yeah?
- F2: Brian's sister Annie wasn't born 'til Brian was eight. He really had more contact with us and other adults than he did with someone closer to his age. I'm sure all that contact with us probably had a huge impact. And, interestingly, Brian has always been comfortable with adults.
- F1: From what you're saying, it sounds like Brian is the classic first child. They say that first children often feel more comfortable with people older than themselves. They seem to have a short childhood and grow up fast.

- O I'm a middle child—neither the first nor the last.
- O I'm the "baby"—the youngest child in the family.
- 2 What are your personality traits? (Check all that are true.)
  - O I'm self-critical. I always feel I should do better.
  - O I'm a rebel.
  - O I'm popular. I have a lot of friends.
  - O I feel less important than my older or younger siblings.
  - O I love to clown around and make people laugh.
  - O I can be lovable one minute and a rebel the next.
  - O I am creative.

- · Write on the board What is personality, and how does it develop?
- Divide the class into groups of four. Have students choose one person to be the recorder and take notes as the group discusses the question on the board. Encourage students to use themselves as examples.
- Have each group choose a person to role-play the professor and present the notes to the rest of the class.
- Invite groups to share their notes with the class. After each professor speaks, encourage students to ask questions.

Possible responses...

Some people say a person is born with a personality, and there is no way to change it. But life is not that simple. Environment affects how a person grows and develops, and it can influence his or her personality. For example, Myra here is the youngest of five children. She says birth order definitely influenced who she is. As the baby of the family, she never had many responsibilities. There was always someone older to do things for her. Now as an adult, she says it took her a long time to learn to take care of her responsibilities . . .

- · Invite a student to role-play a conversation about the first picture with you. Play the role of the man, and have the student play the woman.
- · Evaluate the student on intelligibility, fluency, correct use of grammar, and appropriate use of vocabulary.

GRAMMAR

The passive voice

The active voice focuses on "the performer" of an action. The passive voice focuses on "the receiver" of the action.

Active voice: Picasso painted Guernica in 1937. (focus on the subject, Picasso—the performer)

Passive voice: Guernica was painted by Picasso in 1937. (focus on the object, Guernica—the receiver)

Form the passive voice with a form of be and the past participle of a verb.

Simple present tense: These vases are made in Korea.

Present perfect: The Mona Lisa has been kept at the Louvre Museum since 1797.

It is common to use the passive voice when the performer of the action is not known or not important.

Pottery is made in many parts of the world.

Use a by phrase in passive voice sentences when it is important to identify the performer of an action.

This dress was designed by Donatella Versace. (important)
This bowl was found by someone in Costa Rica. (not important)

GRAMMAR

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- To introduce the passive voice, write on the board the first two example sentences from the Grammar box, circling Picasso and Guernica.
- Explain that the first sentence is in the active voice. The active voice focuses attention on the performer of the action (what the subject does). The performer in this case is Picasso. The second sentence is in the passive voice. We use the passive voice to focus on the receiver of an action (what happens to the subject), which in this case is the painting.
- Review the first two points and their examples in the Grammar box with the class. Point out that the passive voice can be used in different tenses. Ask What tenses do you see in the example sentences? (Simple present, present perfect.)
- Review the last two points and their examples in the Grammar box. Ask Do we know who makes the pottery?
   (No.) Explain that if students are unsure whether or not to use the by phrase, they should put the sentence into the active voice. Demonstrate by writing on the board Donatella Versace designed this dress.
- Tell students to use their own ideas to write four sentences in the passive voice. When they have finished, have them read their sentences to a partner.

Talk about artistic talent

BEFORE YOU READ

Warm-up Do you do anything artistic, such as drawing, painting, or handicrafts? Why or why not?

I find it relaxing.

Actually, I'm not interested in art.
I don't really think I have any ability. 55

Is it talent or hard work?

When children are asked to draw or paint a picture, they are happy to oblige. And they are willing to talk about and show their creation to anyone they meet. But when adults are asked to do the same thing, they typically get nervous and refuse to even try, claiming that they have no talent.

Most adults see themselves as lacking the "artistic gene." However, when you look at drawings made by artists when they were children, their work doesn't differ much from the scribbles and stick figures all children draw when they are young. When Don Lipski, who makes a successful living as a professional artist, looks back at drawings that he made as a child, he doesn't find any early evidence of his own artistic talent. "I was always making things . . . doodling and putting things together. I didn't think of myself as a creative person. I was just doing what all kids do."

The general belief is that artistic talent is something one is born with: a person either has talent or does not. Clearly, great artists like Michelangelo or Picasso had natural talent and possessed more artistic ability than the average person. However, one factor that isn't often considered is the role that years of training, practice, and hard work have played in the creation of great pieces of art. In addition, most artists are successful because they are passionate about their art—they love what they do. Their passion motivates them to continue to create—and improve their ability—day after day. While natural talent may be an advantage, hard work appears to be a necessary part of the creative process.

In the classic Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain, author Betty Edwards argues that while few people are born with natural artistic talent, all of us have the potential to improve our artistic ability. We just have to be willing to keep working at it. She claims that anyone can learn to use the right side of the brain, the side that governs visual skills like drawing and painting. In other words, artistic ability can be learned.

Emphasize that there is no right or wrong answer. If groups cannot agree on a single definition, tell them to discuss and write two definitions. Have groups share their definitions with the class. (Possible response: Art is something you make, such as a painting, sculpture, or photograph, because you think it's beautiful or to express your feelings.) Then have a student look up art in a dictionary and read the definition. Ask Do you agree with the definition?

- Ask a volunteer to read the caption. Explain that scribble and doodle have similar meanings: children scribble, which means to make meaningless marks on a paper; doodle means to draw without thinking. Adults often doodle while talking on the phone. Ask Do you agree that this picture is "scribble and doodle"?

- Read the title of the article. As students read the article, move around the room and explain vocabulary as needed.
- Once students have read the article, return to the title.
   Ask According to the article, does art require talent or hard work? (Hard work. Talent can give an advantage, but hard work is a necessary part of the creative process.)

- M1: There's a very nicely dressed young woman over here . . Excuse me. Would you mind talking to our listeners today? I'm with Focus on the Arts.
- F2: Oh, I love that show! Are you Paul Green?
- M1: I am. Nice to meet you, uh . . .
- F2: Katherine. Katherine Wolf. Thank you!
- M1: Hi, Katherine. Katherine, I wonder if you have a favorite fashion designer.
- F2: A favorite fashion designer . . . Well, I really like the Italian designer Valentino. He doesn't design dresses anymore, but he's a classic.
- M1: Wasn't there a film about him?
- F2: Actually, I saw it. Valentino, the Last Emperor. I really loved the passion he has for his art.
- M1: So what do you especially like about his work?
- F2: Well I find his dresses really elegant and very original. In the movie, he says his greatest desire was to make women look beautiful. I think he was very successful at doing that. His designs are very flattering to women.
- F2: You know, seeing him in that movie made me want to have a creative job. He inspired me to take fashion design classes myself.
- M1: Really? That's terrific! Thank you, Katherine.
- F2: You're welcome.

INTERVIEW 4

- M1: We have time for one more. Let's see . . . Excuse mel Sirl Could I take just a minute of your time?
- M3: Sure. What's going on?
- M1: Hi, I'm Paul Green from Focus on the Arts, and I'm asking people today about their favorite artists. What about you? Do you have a favorite painter or sculptor?
- M3: Cooll Well, actually I'm very fond of the paintings of Frida Kahlo,
- M1: Oh, the Mexican painter. I love her work, too. By the way. can you tell me your name please?
- M3: Oh, sure. Nick Jenkins.
- M1: So, Nick, what is it that you like so much about Kahlo's
- M3: You know, Kahlo had a very hard life. She was very sick as a child, and as a young woman she was in a terrible accident. So she was always in pain, and she couldn't have any children.
- M1: Really? I didn't know that.
- M3: Yeah. Her work reflects her life experiences. And of course she was married to Diego Rivera, the great Mexican muralist. It wasn't always a happy marriage, so she had a lot of material for creating her art.
- M1: What a life she had!
- M3: You know, her self-portraits really touch my heart. They move me much more than Diego Rivera's work, actually. And he's great.
- M1: Well, they were both great artists with natural talent. Thanks, Nick. It was nice talking with you.
- M3: Hey, my pleasure.
- M1: Well, that's all the time we have for today. And remember, keep focused on the arts!

Which speakers are better—the new ones or the old ones? (They are equally good.)

Which has more new features—the iFriend or the F40? (They have the same number of new features.) Emphasize that as...as is used to say that two things are equal or the same.

- Ask What is the difference between the ZetaB and the Panasox? (The ZetaB has a little less memory than the Panasox.)
- Tell the class to think of pairs of sentences using as... as and almost / nearly as... as, comparing students' hair length, height, age, and other characteristics. For example, My hair is as long as yours. I am almost as tall as you. But you're a little taller.
- Review the last two points and examples in the Grammar box. Ask:

Which printer is noisier: the old one or the new one? (The old one.) Which is more expensive: the G4 or the Z90? (The Z90.) Is the Z90 a lot more expensive? (No.) Does the Z90 have many more problems than the G4? (Yes.)

Emphasize that not as . . . as is used to say that two things are different.

- To further illustrate the difference between quite and nearly, write these sentences on the board;
  - 1. My computer isn't quite as fast as your computer.

    2. My computer isn't nearly as fast as your computer.

    Ask:

Which sentence says that your computer is only a little bit faster than mine? (1.) Which sentence says that your computer is much faster than mine? (2.)

Which words mean that the difference between the computers is very small? (Not quite as ... as.)
Which words mean that there's a big difference between the computers? (Not nearly as ... as.)

 Ask a volunteer to read the last point in the Grammar box. Ask the class to think of additional examples.

Language and culture

- Just and quite add emphasis to a comparison. Just as
   ... as emphasizes the similarity in a comparison. Not quite as ... as emphasizes that the difference is very small.
- Comparisons with as . . . as can focus on an adjective (as good as), an adverb (not cost quite as much as), or a noun (as many new features as . . . ).
- In British English, quite usually means not very; the stress is on quite. For example, the sentence He was quite good means He was not very good. However, in American English, the stress falls on the adjective. He was quite good means He was very good.

FYI: Although adverbs often end in -ly, there are four adverbs that are the same as their adjective forms: hard, fast, early, and late. Hardly and lately are adverbs, but they have very different meanings from hard and late.

AUDIOSCRIPT

1 George Thomas

M: I think I probably spend at least ten hours a day online. I know that's hard to believe, but . . . I'm pretty much what you'd call a computer addict . . . no doubt about it. I'm always surfing the Internet to see what's new. I'm a news junkie, so I visit CNN.com several times a day to see what's in the news. And I belong to a bunch of online groups. There are usually new messages posted every day, but I'm not that interested in responding. I just like to read. My friend Nick usually sends me instant messages throughout the day, so of course I have to respond to those . . . I end up fooling around most of the day . . . a lot more than I'm working, I'm afraid. It's a good thing no one knows . . . well, OK, you know.

2 Sonia Castro [F = Spanish]

F: I joined Facebook a few months ago, and I'm, like, totally into it now. People are constantly inviting me to be their friend, so I've got more than a hundred friends on my Facebook page now. I check it a lot each day to see what's new . . . and there always is something new. And I love that you can upload into the photo section. I've been wasting a lot of time scanning tons of photos . . . photos of my family, photos of my friends, photos of my cat . . . I used to spend a lot of time surfing the Net, but now I spend most of my time on Facebook.

3 Robert Kuan [M = Chinese]

M: I really don't have a lot of time for fooling around on the Internet. I'm the kind of guy who sends a few e-mails to his friends and family once in a while . . . and when I need to use the Internet, I'm in and I'm out. I don't like surfing around . . . to me it's just a total waste of time. Mainly, I just use my computer for work. There are a few programs I have to use . . . you know, Word, Excel . . . And of course people in the office communicate a lot more by e-mail than they do in person . . . or even by phone.

4 Nadia Montasser [F = Arabic]

F: I find the Internet really convenient. When you want to buy something, you can do some quick research and find out which product is the most popular or if there are any problems with it. There are a lot of things I used to do by mail or in person, but now I just do them online. I generally buy most of my music online now—it's easy to pay online and download the files onto my MP3 player. And there are a lot of things you can buy at a lower price if you do a little research. You can compare prices really easily.

Hackers Steal 40 Million Credit Card Numbers

leven hackers around the world were accused of stealing more than 40 million credit card numbers on the Internet. They included three people from the U.S. who are accused of hacking into the wireless networks of popular online stores.

Once inside these networks, they installed "sniffer" programs that search for customers' credit card numbers. passwords, and personal information. Credit card numbers were then sold on the Internet, allowing criminals to withdraw thousands of dollars at a time from ATMs

Cyberbullying Leads to Teenager's Death

Ryan Halligan, age 13, was a gentle and sensitive boy that had speech and physical difficulties in his early school years. Over time, a group of students at school began to bully him daily-criticizing his learning disorder and telling him what a bad person he was. According to his father, he spent so much time on instant messaging websites.

He didn't tell his parents that his classmates were cyberbullying him and called him a "loser" in their communications. He told one of his friends online that he was thinking about suicide. A short time later, Ryan committed suicide by hanging himself in the bathroom.

After his death, Ryan's father discovered all the messages exchanged between Ryan and his classmates. The police couldn't do anything because there was no law against such crimes. But he decided to let the whole world know about Ryan's story.

Computer Virus Attacks Get Worse

"We're losing the battle against computer viruses," says David Farber, professor of computer science at Carnegie Mellon University. These viruses, which can enter computer systems through junk e-mail, have reached epidemic proportions, slowing down and sometimes shutting down computers in both large and small companies. In one year alone, they were reported to have caused $13 billion in damage.

Companies have been trying for years to protect themselves with anti-virus programs, but criminals are creating newer, improved viruses faster than these programs can keep up.

Warm-up

Suggested	5	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

 After pairs discuss the questions, ask students to share their answers with the class. Write student responses on the board in two columns:

Problems students	Problems students have had	have heard about

• Discuss ways to resolve these problems with the class.

Learning Strategies

Suggested	10-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Before students read, have volunteers read the titles of the articles. Ask What problems will these articles talk about? (Hackers, computer viruses, and cyberbullying.) If necessary, explain cyberbullying by dividing the word into its parts: cyber refers to messages and information on the Internet; to bully means to scare someone by showing power or threatening violence. Write the problems on the board.
- Tell students to keep their books closed and work in pairs to discuss what they know about these problems.
   Then have students open their books and read the articles.
- Check comprehension by asking What are "sniffer" programs? (Programs that search for customers' credit card numbers, passwords, and personal information.)
  How can viruses enter computer systems? (Through junk e-mail.) Who was cyberbullying Ryan? (A group of students at school.)
- As a class, discuss which problem students think is the most serious. Have students keep their books open so they can refer to specific information in the articles.

Option: [+5 minutes] To challenge students, have them close their books and listen to the audio of each article before reading. After each article, ask students what they remember about it. When students have finished, have them open their books and check their ideas in the Reading.

Option: [+5–10 minutes] To extend the activity, have students discuss the following questions in groups: Has your computer ever had a virus? If yes, what happened?

Option: [+10 minutes] As an alternative approach, do a jigsaw reading. Divide the class into four groups. Assign each group one article and have them summarize the problem and discuss ways to prevent it. When they've finished, have each group give a short presentation to the class, including a summary of the article and suggestions for handling the problem.

Option: [+15 minutes] For a challenge, have students write a "letter to the editor" to respond to one of the three articles. Tell students to give advice on what people can do to avoid the problems discussed. Have students exchange letters and give each other feedback.

Extra Reading Comprehension Questions

A Understand from context

Suggested	4-6	Your actual

- Begin by having students match each of the terms in the exercise to the article in which it appeared. (First article: hacker, criminal; second article: computer virus, junk e-mail, anti-virus program; third article: cyberbully.)
- Encourage students to try to complete the exercise without looking back at the articles. If necessary, tell them to look up any words they didn't know.
- · Have students compare answers in pairs.

B Relate to personal experience

- Divide the class into small groups to discuss the questions. Assign one student in each group the role of recorder.
- After groups discuss the questions, have each recorder share the group's conclusions with the class.

   Do you belong to any social networks?
   Why do you think some people might be uncomfortable on the Internet?

A (*) Listening comprehension

Suggested	6-10	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Tell students to listen to the conversations with their books closed. After each conversation, ask What are the people talking about? (1. Monitors; 2. web cameras; 3. CD drives; 4. computer games.)
- Have students listen to the conversations again with their books open and complete the exercise. Tell them to listen carefully to the as... as comparisons. Remind students that the adverb just emphasizes similarity. The adverb almost indicates that two things are similar but not exactly the same. Negatives with not as... as suggest difference.
- · Allow students to listen again to check their answers.
- Review answers with the class. If necessary, write on the board any lines from the conversations that students had trouble with.

AUDIOSCRIPT

CONVERSATION 1 [F = Spanish]

- F: You know, I was planning to buy a new C40 computer, but I changed my mind.
- M: Why? the C40 is a good model.
- F: I know, but I've heard that the X8 computer comes with a better monitor.
- M: Really? The C40 monitor is just as large as the one that comes with the X8. They're both 21 inches.
- F: True. But the X8 monitor has a brighter screen.

CONVERSATION 2 [M = Japanese]

- M: I'm thinking of getting the Hip Web Camera. What do you think?
- F: Well, I've heard the Hip isn't quite as expensive as the Pentac Web Camera, but it's just as good.
- M: Really? Are you sure?
- F: That's what I've heard. Check it out for yourself.

CONVERSATION 3

- F: Didn't you get a new Mundite CD drive?
- M: Yeah. I replaced my old one.
- F: Are you satisfied?
- M: Well, to tell the truth, Mundite's new CD drive is not as fast as the old one.
- F: Really!

CONVERSATION 4

- M: I'm thinking of getting the new Play Zone 3 computer game for my kids. Is it any good?
- F: My son really likes it. Actually, so do !! I think it's almost as much fun as Play Zone 1 and 2.
- M: Almost as much fun? That doesn't sound so good.

- Write on the board moral dilemma. Explain that a dilemma is a problem. When we must make a difficult choice, we say that we are faced with a problem or dilemma. Ask students to infer the meaning of moral dilemma from the context. Ask What moral dilemma is each person facing? (Whether to take the box with the cheaper price; what to do with the watch someone forgot; whether to say something about the wrong total; whether to keep two windbreakers even though only one was ordered.)
- Model the activity by asking the class about the first photo. Ask What do you think he should do?
- Have students work in pairs and discuss what the people should do in the three other situations.
- If necessary, explain these items on the guest check:
   Shrimp cocktail is a small dish of cold, cooked shrimp and a sauce eaten at the beginning of the meal; tomato bisque is a thick, creamy tomato soup; sirloin is a steak; sparkling water is a carbonated spring or mineral water.
- · Ask the class:

What's the correct total on the guest check? ($45.20.) Who do you think will have to pay the balance if the customer doesn't correct the mistake? (Possibly the waiter / server.)

What do you think will happen to the windbreaker company if the man keeps two windbreakers?
(Probably nothing.)

Will the man have to pay to mail the second windbreaker back?

Do you think that makes it OK to keep two windbreakers?

 Ask individual students for their opinion on what the people should do.

Language and culture

- Uh-oh is an informal exclamation that indicates that someone has made a mistake. It has a rising then falling intonation.
- In British English, the list you are given in a restaurant that shows what you must pay is called the bill. In American English it is called the check.

A Group work

- Divide the class into small groups to discuss the question. If any students don't feel comfortable discussing their own moral dilemmas, ask them to talk about those of people they know or moral dilemmas from TV shows.
- Review responses with the class. Then ask the class Were you surprised by some of your classmates' moral dilemmas? Were you surprised by their actions?

Option: [+10 minutes] To extend the activity, dictate the questions below to students or write them on the board. Then have students ask and answer the questions in pairs. Encourage them to elaborate on their answers with details.

teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Before students complete the survey, ask volunteers to read the questions aloud. Then ask for a show of hands and write in the numbers.
- Ask Who chose Other? What would you do? If no one chose Other, have students think of what else a person could do in this situation; for example, offer to pay for the damage or offer to replace the plate.

Option: [+10 minutes] As an alternative approach, conduct the survey as a mingle activity. Have students move around the room and speak to their classmates individually. When students have finished, review answers with the class to make sure that everyone has the same number of answers for each item. Then discuss other possible courses of action for Matt.

Option: [+5 minutes] To extend the activity, ask pairs to continue the conversation for a couple of more exchanges to determine what Matt actually decides to do. For example:

Noah: You're too honest. It's just a plate. Just forget it. Matt: I don't know. Maybe you're right. Let's just leave. Invite pairs to share their conversations with the class.

B (1) Photo story Read and listen to a conversation about a moral dilemma.

Matt: I can't believe it! I just picked this up to look at it and the thing broke in two. And with these ridiculous prices, it's going to cost me an arm and a leg.

Noah: Oh, forget it. I'll bet it was already broken.

Matt: You're probably right.

Noah: Just put it back on the shelf.
The place is empty. No one saw.
Let's just split.

Matt: I couldn't do that.

Noah: Why not? You said it yourself.
The prices are ridiculous.

Matt: Well, put yourself in the owner's shoes. Suppose the plate were yours? How would you feel if someone broke it and didn't tell you?

Noah: Well I'm not the owner.

And, anyway, for him it would be just a drop in the bucket. To you it's a lot of money.

Matt: Maybe so. But if I ran out without telling him, I couldn't face myself.

  - 1 Was it Matt's fault that the plate broke? No, he just picked it up, and it broke in two.
  - 2 Why does Noah think they can leave without saying anything? It was already broken / No one saw
  - 3 What opinion does Matt have about the prices in the store? That they are ridiculous.
  - 4 Why does Noah think the broken plate won't be a problem for the owner? For him it would be a drop in the bucket.
  - 5 What reason does Matt have for telling the owner? He couldn't face himself otherwise.

- Future factual conditionals: usage and common errors
- Order of clauses: punctuation

Remember: Conditional sentences express the results of actions or conditions. if-clause (the condition) result clause

If I don't use English in class, I won't learn to speak it.

Real conditional sentences express factual or future results.

If I do the right thing, I can sleep at night. (factual: a result that always occurs if "I do the right thing") If they don't make a reservation, they won't get a table. (future: a result that will occur if "they don't make a reservation")

The unreal conditional

Unreal conditional sentences describe what happens if a condition that doesn't exist actually does occur.

unreal action or condition result (if it were true)

If I found a wallet in the street, I'd look for the name of the owner. (unreal: I haven't found a wallet.)

In the if-clause, use the simple past tense. For the verb be, always use were. In the result clause, use would and a base form.

unreal action or condition

If I had to make a hard decision. If she knew how to speak French, If you broke something in a store, If you were Matt, If I were there. If you weren't my friend, result (if it were true) I would try to do the right thing. she would help them. would you pay for it? what would you do? I'd know what to do.

I wouldn't tell you what happened.

Be careful! Don't use would in the if- clause. If I knew his name, I would tell you. NOT If I would know his name...

Note: In real and unreal conditional sentences the clauses can occur in either order.

If I knew, I would tell you. OR I would tell you if I knew.

- On the board, write conditional sentences. Read the first grammar point and the example sentence. Be sure students note that a conditional sentence has an if-clause, which introduces the condition, and a result clause.
- Ask students to suggest other results for the condition If I don't use English in class. (Possible response: My teacher will give me a bad grade.)
- On the board, write The real conditional. Ask a volunteer to read the next grammar point. Have students underline the verbs in the if-clause and the result clause in the first sentence. (Do; can sleep.)
- Have students underline the verbs in the if-clause and the result clause in the second sentence. (Don't make; won't get.) Point out that a future conditional sentence has the present tense in the if-clause and the future in the result clause. Ask students to restate the sentence, using the affirmative. (If they make a reservation, they will get a table.) To test understanding of real conditional, ask Can this situation really happen? (Yes.)
- On the board, write The unreal conditional. Explain that, unlike the real conditional, the unreal conditional describes an imaginary situation and its result. Write on the board If I were you I would study harder. Ask Is it possible for me to be you? (No.)
- Ask a student to read the explanation under The unreal conditional and the example sentence. Write it on the board. Have students circle the verbs in each clause. (Found; 'd look.)
- Read the next grammar point. Call on students to read the example sentences. After each one, ask if the person actually has to do what is proposed in the if-clause:

  Do I have to make a hard decision? (No.)

  Does she know how to speak French? (No.)

  Did you break something in a store? (No.)

  Are you Matt? (No.)

  Am I there? (No.)

  Are you my friend? (Yes.)
- Read the note and then ask students to change the order of the clauses in the example sentences.
- Draw students' attention to the Be Careful! box. Make sure they understand not to use would in the if-clause.

- To review, ask What's an unreal condition? (A condition that doesn't exist.)
- Have a volunteer read item 6. Then ask Am I you? (No, therefore the condition is unreal.) Point out that the form provides another hint that the condition is unreal. Ask What is the verb form in the if-clause? (Simple past tense: were.) What is the form in the result clause? (Would + base form, tell.)
- Have students complete the rest of the exercise in pairs. Then review answers with the class.

Option: [+5 minutes] To expand the exercise, have pairs write two questions for each sentence. For example, 1. Would you pay the bill if we ate in the restaurant? Who would pay if we ate in a restaurant? Move around the room and help as needed. Then ask pairs to read their questions to the class. Call on volunteers to answer the questions.

- Write on the board If I found money on the street, I would probably keep it. Ask What is the verb in the if-clause of this unreal conditional sentence? (Found.) What is the verb in the result clause? (Would give.)
- Reverse the order of clauses and write on the board I would probably keep money if I found it on the street.
   Ask Does this sentence have the same meaning? (Yes.)
   Then ask students to change the sentence into a question. (Would you keep the money if you found it on the street?)
- Tell students to complete the exercise and watch the order of clauses. Remind them that the simple past is in the if-clause and would + base form appears in the result clause.
- Review answers with the class.

CONVERSATION MODEL

A 🕩 Read and listen . . .

Suggested 2 Your actual teaching time: minutes teaching time:

These conversation strategies are implicit in the model:

- Say "You think so?" to reconfirm someone's opinion.
- Provide an emphatic response with "Absolutely."
- Tell students to look at the photo. Ask Where are they? (In a restaurant / café.)
- After students read and listen to the conversation, read aloud the woman's first line and have students suggest another way of saying They didn't charge us for the desserts. (The restaurant didn't include the cost of the desserts in the check.)
- Have students read and listen again. Ask a student to read the confirming responses that can replace Absolutely, and then play the accompanying audio.
- Have students work in pairs to practice the last two lines of the Conversation Model, trying out the different confirming responses. Move around the room as students work.

B () Rhythm and intonation

Suggested 3 Your actual teaching time:

- Have students repeat each line chorally. Make sure they:
  use rising intonation for Really? and *You think so?*put extra stress on the third syllable in Absolutely.
- Point out that the second syllable of didn't is greatly reduced in spoken English.

Option: [+4 minutes] For additional practice with fluency, have students use the version of the Conversation Model without pauses. Tell them to try to speak in unison with the audio. Repeat this exercise at least twice and have students change roles.

PRONUNCIATION

Possessive pronouns / Whose

Possessive pronouns can replace nouns and noun phrases. They answer questions with Whose and clarify answers to questions with Which.

A: Whose coat is that? B: It's mine. (=It's my coat.)

A: Which is her cup? B: This one is hers.

Be careful!

 Don't use a possessive adjective in place of a possessive pronoun, Is this yours? NOT Is this your?

Don't use a noun after a possessive pronoun.
 These shoes are mine. NOT They're mine shoes.

CONVERSATION MODEL

(i) Read and listen . . .

Suggested	2	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

This conversation strategy is implicit in the model: • Acknowledge thanks with "Don't mention it."

- · Before students read and listen to the conversation, give them a minute to study the picture. Then tell them to close their books, Ask Where are the people in the picture? (In a restaurant / café.) What do you think the woman is saying to the man? (Here's your daughter's jacket.)
- · Have students read and listen to the conversation.
- Check comprehension by asking: Whose jacket is the woman holding? (The girl's.) How do you know? (She says, "Isn't this jacket hers?") Why does the man say "I did?"? (Because he doesn't realize he forgot something.)

What do you think the woman means when she says "Don't mention it."? (You're welcome.)

- · Point out the phrases for acknowledging thanks and play the accompanying audio.
- · Ask pairs of students to read the last two lines in the conversation, replacing Don't mention it with the different expressions.

Language and culture

 The most common way of acknowledging thanks is You're welcome. The expressions My pleasure, Don't mention it, and Not at all are considered more formal. No problem is less formal, and Sure is very informal.

Option: [+5 minutes] For a challenge, have pairs thank each other and respond with the different expressions for acknowledging thanks. For example:

A: Thank you for helping me with the computer. B: No problem.

A: Thanks for going with me to the art museum.

B: Sure.

(a) Rhythm and intonation

Suggested	3	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Have students repeat each line. Make sure they:
- o use rising intonation for I did? and Isn't this jacket hers?
- o pause after Oh.
- o stress right in You're right.
- o use equal stress on all words in Don't mention it.

GRAMMAR

Suggested	6-11	Your actual

- · Have students read the three lines in the Grammar box and the examples. Ask What words does mine replace? (My coat.) What words does hers replace? (Her cup.)
- · Hold up a book and say This is my book. This book is mine. Give the book to Student A and say This is John's book. This book is his. Have Student A give the book to Student B and answer the question Whose book is this? Have students continue passing the book and answering the question.
- To practice clarifying answers to questions with which, show students your pen and then borrow a pen from a student. Ask Which pen is his / hers? Which pen is mine?
- Ask volunteers to read the sentence pairs.
- Read the Be careful! note to differentiate possessive adjectives and possessive pronouns. Write on the board That's my jacket It's my Ask Why is that incorrect? (My is a possessive adjective.) Then write It's mine jacket. Ask Why is that incorrect? (We don't use a noun after a possessive pronoun.)

Language and culture

From the Longman Corpus: A common error of English learners is confusing possessive pronouns and possessive adjectives, such as using yours, hers, ours, and theirs to modify plural nouns. Possessive pronouns are never used as possessive adjectives.

Option: [+5-10 minutes] To extend the activity, read the first sentence in each of the following pairs and have students complete the second sentence. 1. These aren't your keys. These keys are ___ (Possible responses: mine, his, hers, ours, theirs. [Any logical possessive pronoun is correct.l) 2. The green house is Mary's. This house is _ 3. My phone number is 555-3430. What's ___? 4. Here's Edwin's car. Where's ___? 5. Do you have your book? I have ____. 6. I showed you my license. Now show me ____.

Tell students to pay particular attention to numbers 6-10 and not be deceived by the possessive adjectives that precede the nouns.
- · Have students complete the task in pairs. Move around the room and help students as needed.
- · Review answers with the class by asking students to read the corrected sentences aloud.

B Grammar practice

Suggested !	3-4	Your actual

- Begin by reminding students that a possessive adjective is followed by a noun, and a possessive pronoun is not followed by a noun. Have students find the items that require a possessive adjective. (2B parents; 3A suitcase; 3B suitcase; 4B necklace; 5A car; 6A house; 6B office.)
- After students complete the statements and questions, tell them to compare answers with a partner.
- Review answers by calling on pairs to read the conversations.

Option: [+5 minutes] To challenge students, assign a conversation to each pair. Have students continue the conversation for two more exchanges and use at least one more possessive pronoun or possessive adjective + noun.

C ◄» Listening comprehension

Suggested	4-6	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Before students listen, have them skim the statements.
   Ask Which item can you answer before the listening?
   (Second blank in 2.) Why? (Because we know we need a possessive pronoun to replace "Brad's wife," a woman, hers.)
- As students prepare to listen, tell them to pay attention if a male or female is speaking and if the person speaking refers to one or two people.
- Play the audio. Have students compare answers in pairs, and then discuss any questions with the class.

   (Wallet, glove, jacket, cell phone, suitcase, umbrella, books, glasses.) Explain that these are items people often lose or forget. Ask What other items do people often forget? (Possible responses: Scarves, notebooks, pens.)
- Refer students to the Conversation Model on page 114 to review returning someone else's property. Have students also review the ways of acknowledging thanks.

- Be sure to reinforce the use of the conversation strategy. For example, to reinforce the meaning of "Don't mention it" and "Not at all," do a quick wave of your hand downward to demonstrate that a Thank you is not necessary. For acknowledging thanks with "My pleasure" and "You're welcome," smile and demonstrate direct eye contact with the person you are speaking to.

- After students listen with their books closed, ask them to summarize each conversation. (1. Should a man wear an earring to the office on his first day at a new job?
  2. A man has a tattoo but doesn't like his wife having a tattoo.
  3. A father wants his daughter to stay home and have children rather than be a lawyer.
  4. A father wants his daughter to dress modestly.)
- Before listening again, ask students to open their books and try to complete as many statements as they can.
- If necessary, have students listen again to complete the exercise. Have them compare answers in pairs.
- Review answers with the class and explain any unknown terms; for example, That's crazy is a very informal but strong way to disagree. Tell students to use it carefully as it could be interpreted as insulting in more formal situations. The phrase You got it is an informal way of saying Yes, that's right or Yes, you understood.

You got it can also be used as an informal affirmative response to a request. For example:

A: Could you finish the report by 2:00?

B: You got it.

 Tell pairs to correct all of the false statements. If necessary, allow students to listen once more to check their answers.

- M: That's crazy. What's wrong with an earring, Beth?
- F: Nothing. But lots of people are old-fashioned, and they don't think men should wear earnings... at least at the office.
- M: You're only twenty-eight and you sound like my grandmother. This is the twenty-first century. In any case, I need to be who I am. I'm an individualist.

CONVERSATION 2

- F1: Celia, what a great hat! When did you get it?
- F2: Just last week, But my husband thinks it's awful.
- F1: Doesn't he have one, too?
- F2: Yes. But he says it's not the same thing.
- F1: You mean he thinks it's OK for men but not for women?
- F2: You got it.
- F1: What a double standard!

CONVERSATION 3

- M1: Mark, I'm really unhappy. My daughter wants to go to law school.
- M2: That's great! What's the problem?
- M1: Well, I was hoping she'd marry a lawyer, not be one!
- M2: Why's that?
- M1: Well, it's just that I think men should be lawyers and women should stay home and have children.
- M2: That's a little sexist, if you ask me!

CONVERSATION 4

- M: Katel You can't go out in those clothes. I can see your tummy!
- F: So? That's the style. Don't you watch TV? Read magazines?
- M: I don't care. Girls should be modest. People will think you're a bad girl.
- F: But, Dad. You know I'm a good person. I follow all the rules. Everyone knows that!
- M: That's true. But modesty is very important for girls. If you're modest, people will know you're a good girl.

Suggested	5	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- After reading the directions, have students work in pairs to choose the correct definitions, and then review answers with the class.
- To check comprehension, ask What's the double standard referred to in the conversation between Celia and her friend? (Celia's husband has a hat but doesn't think it's OK for a woman to have one.) What sexist ideas does the man in the third conversation have? (His daughter should not go to law school and become a lawyer but should get married, stay home, and have children.)

Suggested teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Ask students to complete the task individually. Move around the room as students work. If they have difficulty with the vocabulary, refer them to Exercise B.
- After students write their examples, tell them to compare examples in pairs.
- Invite students to share their examples with the class without mentioning the word or phrase it illustrates. Have the class guess if the example illustrates old-fashioned, a double standard, sexist, or modesty.
- After each example, ask the class Do you agree that this is a [double standard]? Why? Why not?

D Pair work

Suggested	4-7	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Ask the class to look at the photo. Have a student read the caption. Ask Would you see something like this today? (Not in most places in the U.S.)
- Have pairs look at the sample answer in quotes and discuss the picture in more detail using the words as indicated.
- · Move around the room and help as needed.

Option: [+5-10 minutes] To challenge students, tell them to imagine they are one of the people in the photograph. Have them write a paragraph describing what they were thinking and feeling when the photograph was taken. Then group students together who imagined they were the same person and have them compare reactions. Finally have groups share their reactions with the class.

Homeless Man Returns Wallet with $900

Posted on: Monday, 17 April

SANTA ANA, Calif. - A homeless man searching through trash bins for recyclable cans found a missing wallet and returned it to its owner. Kim Bogue, who works in the city, realized that her wallet was missing last week and doubted she'd ever get back the $900 and credit cards inside. "I prayed that night and asked God to help me," said Bogue, who was saving the money for a trip to her native Thailand.

Days later, a homeless man found the wallet wrapped in a plastic bag in the trash, where Bogue had accidentally thrown it away with her lunch. He gave it to Sherry Wesley, who works in a nearby building. "He came to me with the wad of money and said, 'This probably belongs to someone that you work with. Can you return it?" Wesley said.

"He has a very good heart," said Bogue, who gave the man a $100 reward. "If someone else had found it, the money would have been gone."

Man Risks Life to Save Another

Many people who ride a busy urban subway wonder, "What would happen if I fell off the platform and onto the tracks? What would I do?" Others wonder, "What would I do if someone else fell?"

That question was answered in a split-second decision made by "subway hero" Wesley Autrey, a fifty-year-old New York City construction worker on his way to work. Autrey jumped onto the tracks to save a fellow passenger from an oncoming New York City subway train.

The passenger, Cameron Hollopeter, 20, a film student at the New York Film Academy, had fallen between the tracks after suffering a seizure. Autrey rolled Hollopeter into a gap between the rails and covered him with his own body just as the train entered the station. Both men survived.

"I don't feel like I did something spectacular; I just saw someone who needed help," Mr. Autrey said. "I did what I felt was right."

An act of honesty by airport screener

NEW DELHI: In a display of honesty, a security agent at the Indira Gandhi International Airport handed over a small plastic bag with US $3,000 in cash to a passenger who had completely forgotten the bag after it passed through the airport screening machine.

Noticing that the bag had been left behind, Dalbir Singh made an announcement asking passengers to come forward to claim it. However, when no one claimed it, Singh inspected the baggage tag and guessed it probably belonged to a passenger en route to Mumbai. An announcement was made on the next flight to Mumbai and the owner of the bag came forward to collect it.

Singh was given a cash reward for his honesty.

Suggested	2	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

• To introduce the topic, ask a student to read the headlines of the articles. Then read the question aloud. Write on the board kindness and honesty. Ask students to give examples of kindness and then of honesty. Write them on the board under the appropriate heading. (Possible responses: Helping an older person carry something heavy; reporting finding a lost credit card.)

READING ())

Suggested	12-15	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- As students read the articles, write on the board:
   Which two articles are about money? ("Homeless man..." and "An act of honesty...")
   In which article could a person have died? ("Man risks life...")
  - Which act of kindness / honesty could you imagine performing?
- Check comprehension by having students answer the questions in pairs and then reviewing answers with the class.

FYI: If students are having problems with the names in the reading, have them read along a second time while playing the audio. Hearing the names will help students sound them out the next time they read the articles.

A Summarize

- To help students with their summaries, ask What are five information questions words? Write on the board What? When? Where? Why? How? Explain that students will need to use these words to help them choose important facts about the article.
- Tell students to work individually. Give them a few minutes to choose an article and take notes.
- With their books closed, have students work in pairs and summarize their articles for each other. Encourage students, while they are listening to their partner, to ask questions about anything they don't understand.
- Have students open their books and make sure their summaries are correct.
- Invite volunteers to share their summaries with the class. If appropriate, prompt students by asking questions such as What happened? Where did it happen? How...

Option: [+8 minutes] As an alternative approach, do this exercise as a jigsaw. Have students form groups of three and count off I, 2, 3. Assign each number a different article and tell them to read it individually. Once students have had time to read the article and make notes, tell them to work in their groups and listen to one another's summaries and take notes.

Option: [+8 minutes] Alternatively, have students listen to the audio of the articles and take notes of the main points. Have students prepare their summaries based on their notes.

B Interpret information

Suggested	3	Your actual

- Model pronunciation of the names by reading the questions about the articles aloud (Bogue = /bovg/; Autrey = /'a tri/). Tell students to discuss the questions in pairs.
- After pairs discuss the questions, have students share answers with the class.

C Relate to personal experience

Suggested	5	Your actual

- Model the activity by focusing on one article and telling the students a similar story that you have heard.
   Then ask students to think of stories they've heard or experienced themselves.

- Call on a student to read the first situation and the four questions. Review the meaning of could, should, and would: Could + base form expresses possibility; should + base form expresses obligation; would indicates an unreal condition. To remind students what an unreal conditional is, ask Did you find my cell phone? What would you do if you found my cell phone?
- Give the students a few minutes to write their answers.
   After students answer the questions for each situation, have them compare answers with a partner.

- While students are discussing their responses, move around the room and listen for the correct use of could + base form, should + base form, and would + base form in the result clause of the unreal conditional sentences.

 To review the answers, draw the graphic organizer below on the board or print it out from the ActiveTeach Multimedia Disc and distribute to students. Note that the answers in the chart are merely possible responses.

In the first picture, what does the woman on the plane see?
Whose phone is it?
What does she do with the phone?
Does she keep the phone?
Does the woman find the owner of the phone?
What does the man say?
What does the woman say?

- Ask a student to role-play a conversation about the second picture with you. Play the role of the woman and have the student play the man.
- Evaluate the student on intelligibility, fluency, correct use of grammar, and appropriate use of vocabulary.

Option: Top Notch Project

Have students research magazines to create an appearance Do's and Don'ts list to present to classmates.

UNIT 1 Lesson 2

The present perfect: use and placement of yet and already

Use already in affirmative statements. Place already before the main verb or at the end of the statement. I've already read the book. OR I've read the book already.

Use yet in negative statements. Place yet at the end of the statement or between have and the base form. I haven't read the book yet. OR I haven't yet read the book.

Use yet or already in questions.

Have you read the book yet? OR Have you already read the book? Have you read the book already?

Be careful!

Don't use yet in affirmative statements. Don't use already in negative statements.

DON'T SAY Yes, I've read the book yet. / No, I haven't already read the book.

Don't use ever with yet or already.

DON'T SAY Have you ever read the book yet? / Have you ever read the book already?

- A On a separate sheet of paper, rewrite each statement or question, using already or yet. See page T122 for answers.
  - 1 (yet) Has she finished the homework?
- 3 (already) We've tried fried clams several times.
- 2 (yet) They haven't seen the movie.
- 4 (already) Has your father left?
- B On a separate sheet of paper, rewrite each sentence, using already or yet. See page T122 for answers.
  - 1 I haven't had dinner.

- Read the first rule in the Grammar box aloud. Make sure students know that invert means to change. To check understanding, write on the board You have seen the Eiffel Tower in Paris. Ask which Wh- word could replace the information Eiffel Tower? (What.) Write What under the sentence on the board. Then ask What is the subject of the sentence? (You.) Ask a volunteer to invert have and you and write out the rest of the sentence.
- Call on volunteers to read the remainder of the information questions. Point out the inversion in each one.

Have you ever made sushi?

Yes, I have. OR Yes, I've made sushi. NOT Yes, I've ever made sushi.

No, I never have. OR No, I've never made sushi.

You can also use before in negative statements with never.

I've never been to Thailand before.

In very informal speech, ever is sometimes used to strongly emphasize never. This meaning of ever is similar to "in my whole life." I've never ever been to Thailand.

- 5 Have you ever fallen in love?
- 3 Have you ever been to Hawaii?
- 6 Have you ever played golf?

UNIT 2 Lesson 1

The present perfect and the present perfect continuous: unfinished actions

Unfinished (or continuous) actions are those that began in the past, continue in the present, and may possibly continue into the future. Here are three ways to talk about unfinished actions:

- 1 the present perfect with since: Use since with a stated start time in the past.

  I've lived here since 2001. (2001 is the stated start time. I still live here, so the action "continues.")
- 2 the present perfect with for: Use for to describe the period of time from its start until the present.

  I've lived here for five years. (Emphasis is on the five-year period. I still live here, so the action "continues.")
- 3 the present perfect continuous with for or since. (Form the present perfect continuous with the present perfect of be and a present participle.)

I've been living here since 2001. OR I've been living here for five years. (In both cases, the action "continues.")

When describing continuing and unfinished actions with for and since, the present perfect and the present perfect continuous are both correct. Some people feel the present perfect continuous emphasizes the continuing time a bit more.

- A Read the sentences with the present perfect. Check each sentence that describes an unfinished (or continuing) action.
- ☑ 1 The Grants have lived in Buenos Aires since the late
- ✓ 5 We have eaten in that great Indian restaurant for years.
- seventies.
- ☐ 6 They've eaten in that Indian restaurant before.
- 2 Carmen has been living in Buenos Aires since last year.
- 7 My brother has been playing tennis for many years.

3 I've visited Paris three times.

- 8 Min-ji has played tennis twice.
- 4 Ted has been visiting Paris since the 1980's.
- B Complete each statement with the present perfect continuous.
  - 1 Wall-E has been playing (play) at the Children's Classics Cinema every Saturday since 2009.
  - 2 Robert has been waiting (wait) in the ticket holders' line for a pretty long time.
  - 3 People have been worrying about (worry about) violence in movies since the sixties.
  - 4 | ve been talking about (talk about) that movie for weeks.
  - 5 We' ve been coming (come) to this classics movie theater for two years.

Spelling rules for the present participle: review

Add -ing to the base form of the verb

speak -> speaking

If the base form ends in a silent -e, drop the -e and add -ing.

→ having

In verbs of one syllable, if the last three letters are a consonant-vowel-consonant (C-V-C) series, double the last consonant and then add -ing.

CVC

sit → sitting

Be careful! Don't double the last consonant in words that end in  $\underline{-w}$ ,  $\underline{-x}$ , or  $\underline{-y}$ .

 $\rightarrow$  flowing fix  $\rightarrow$ fixina pay  $\rightarrow$ paying

In verbs of more than one syllable that end in a consonant-vowel-consonant series, double the last consonant only if the stress is on the last syllable.

control → controlling BUT order → ordering

On a separate sheet of paper, write the present participle for the following base forms.

1 find	finding	8 go	going	15 come	coming	22 forget	forgetting	29 begin	beginning

Ways to express preferences: review

Use like, prefer, or would rather with a direct object to indicate preferences. The direct object can be a noun or noun phrase, a base form, or an infinitive, depending on the structure you use.

Nouns or noun phrases

She'd like tea

We'd like an early breakfast tomorrow.

Sarah prefers coffee.

Would they prefer a horror film?

Base forms

They'd rather see a comedy.

Would you rather have coffee or tea?

I'd rather not go out tonight.

Infinitives

I'd like to go to the movies tonight.

She'd prefer not to show her children that film

I prefer (OR I'd prefer) to see something less bloody.

On a separate sheet of paper, write sentences and questions using the following words and phrases. See page T124 for answers. 1 They / prefer / see / the Woody Allen film.

  - 4 Would you prefer popcorn or potato chips from the refreshment stand?
  - 5 Would you like to rent a DVD or go out to the movies?

UNIT 3 Lesson 1

Expressing obligation with have to and must

Use have to and must plus a base form to express obligation when there is no other choice of action available.

Students must take this exam.

You have to take the 6:00 train if you want to arrive on time.

She has to make a reservation before July 15th.

Be careful!

The negative form must not expresses prohibition, not obligation.

You must not smoke in your room. = Don't smoke there.

The negative forms don't have to and doesn't have to express a lack of obligation.

You don't have to show your passport, = It isn't necessary.

Note: Must is very formal and not very common in speaking. It is generally used by a person in authority (e.g. a teacher or boss) to state policy or law. Have to is much more common in both speaking and writing. The more informal have got to* is also common in spoken English.

Sorry. I've got to hurry. I'm going to be late. *There is no negative form of have got to in American English. Use don't have to or doesn't have to.

- A On a separate sheet of paper, write each of the following sentences two ways: with must and with have to. See page T125 for answers.
  - 1 Hotel guests / leave / their luggage at the front desk.
  - 2 Hotel employees / arrive / before 9:00 A.M.
  - 3 Hotel maids / close / the door / while cleaning a room.
  - 4 Hotel guests / park / their cars in front of the hotel.
- On a separate sheet of paper, write each of the sentences in Exercise A again, using must not to express a prohibition. Make changes so the sentence makes sense. See page T125 for answers.

Hotel quests must not leave their luggage at the front desk.

C On a separate sheet of paper, write each of the sentences in Exercise A again, using don't or doesn't have to to express a lack of obligation. Make changes so the sentence makes sense. See page T125 for answers.

Hotel employees don't have to arrive before 9:00 A.M.

Suggestions and advice: could, should, ought to, and had better

Use could plus a base form to suggest or ask about an alternative. There is no negative form.

They could stay at the Fiesta Hotel if the Milton is full. Could they stay at the Fiesta Hotel if the Milton is full?

Use should or ought to plus a base form to state an opinion or give advice.

You should (or ought to) stay at the Milton. It's close to town and very cheap. You shouldn't stay at the Fairway Inn. It's too expensive.

Use had better to state an opinion or give advice. The meaning is similar to should and ought to, but had better expresses the idea that there is a consequence for not doing something.

You'd better stay at the Milton. The other hotels are too far from town. You'd better not stay at the Fairway Inn if you want to save money.

Note: In American English it's very uncommon to use ought to in the negative. It's unusual to say: You ought not stay at the Fairway Inn.

Ought to has the same meaning as should, but should is slightly less formal.

Don't use ought to in questions or negative statements. Use should or shouldn't instead.

On a separate sheet of paper, write five suggestions to a visitor to your city or country, using could, should, should, had better, and had better not. Answers will vary.

You should stay at a hotel on the beach. The beaches are really beautiful, and the location is convenient.

Expectation: be supposed to Use be supposed to to mean that someone expects an action from another person.

We're supposed to check out of our room by twelve. (The hotel expects guests to check out at that time.)

The negative form is be not supposed to.

Hotel guests are not supposed to take anything from their rooms.

E On a separate sheet of paper, write five sentences that describe actions your school expects from its students. Use be supposed to. Answers will vary.

Students are supposed to come on time to class. They're not supposed to be late.

- F Choose the sentence closer in meaning to each numbered statement or question.
  - 1 Do you think the Milton Hotel is a good place to stay?

- Ask several students Do you know the weather for tomorrow? Write students' predictions on the board. Make sure that you have examples with will and be going to.
- Call on a student to read the first rule. Ask students to make additional predictions about the future, such as Our team will win the football game. The pool is going to reopen in July.

FYI: Be going to is used to make predictions more often when there is obvious evidence; for example, It's going to rain. (There are black clouds in the sky, which give us obvious evidence.) Will is used slightly more often when making a prediction based on opinion. However, these distinctions are not always observed and the forms are used interchangeably in informal spoken English.

- Read the second rule aloud. Then write Weekend plans: I'm going to ... Ask students to share what they are going to do this weekend.
- Focus on the third rule and read the example sentence.
   Say I don't have any plans after school today. Maybe I'll go grocery shopping. Or maybe I'll go to the park and read a book. Clarify that these are ideas you came up with right now for the immediate future.
- Read the fourth rule and the example sentence aloud.

- After students write their sentences on the topic of their choice, call on each student to read his or her sentences and have the class identify the topic: exercise, breakfast food, or clothes. Students will be able to see how they compare with their classmates.

Option: [+4 minutes] Tell students to imagine that the class is going to have a party. Have students use will in an offer

- Move around the room, helping students as needed. If students have numbered any actions incorrectly, help them see why a particular action happened first.
- Review answers by having students write their sentences on the board and correcting them with the class.

Answers to Unit 4, Lesson 1

- She was taking a test at school when she heard the fire alarm.
- While I was talking to my mother on the phone, the TV show started.
- Mr. Park was cooking dinner when Mrs. Park finished the laundry.
- Mr. Kemp was working in the garden when the rain began.
- While Claudia was picking up their rental car, Alex called their hotel.
- 6. While Nancy was shopping at the grocery store, she saw an old friend.

UNIT 3 Lesson 2

Will and be going to Use will or be going to for predictions about the future. The meaning is the same.

It'll rain tomorrow.

It's going to rain tomorrow.

Use be going to when you already have a plan for the future.

A: Are you coming to class tomorrow?

B: No, I'm going to go to the beach instead. NOT No, I'll go to the beach instead.

Other uses of will

Use will to talk about the immediate future when you do not already have a plan.

Maybe I'll go to the beach this weekend. NOT Maybe I'm going to go to the beach this weekend.

Use will to show willingness.

I'll eat chicken, but I won't eat seafood. (expresses willingness)

Compare will with be going to:

I'm going to eat chicken, but I'm not going to eat seafood. (expresses a plan)

- A On a separate sheet of paper, write five sentences about your plans for the weekend, using be going to. Answers will vary.
- B On a separate sheet of paper, write five sentences with will or won't for willingness on one of the following topics.

Answers will vary.

Topics

kinds of exercise you're willing (or not willing) to do kinds of food you're willing (or not willing) to eat for breakfast kinds of clothes you're willing (or not willing) to wear

UNIT 4 Lesson 1

The past continuous: other uses

The past continuous describes an action that was continuous until (and possibly after) the moment at which another action took place. The words when or while are often used in sentences that contrast continuing and completed actions.

He was talking on the phone when the storm began. (continuous action, then completed action) While I was living in Chile, I got married. (continuous action, then completed action)

The past continuous also describes two continuing actions occurring in the same period of time.

While she was driving, her husband was reading the newspaper.

They were eating, and the music was playing.

On a separate sheet of paper, use the prompts to write logical sentences. Use the past continuous and the simple past in each sentence. See page T127 for answers.

Nouns and pronouns: review

A noun is a word that names a person, a place, or a thing. Nouns are either common or proper. A proper noun is capitalized, common nouns: car, windshield, doctor, woman, father proper nouns: Martin, Caracas, Carla's Restaurant

Two functions of nouns in sentences are subjects and direct objects. The subject performs the action of the yerb The object receives the action.

subject

direct object

Carla's Restaurant serves breakfast all day long.

A pronoun is a word that represents or replaces a noun. Pronouns also function as subjects and direct objects.

subject pronouns: I, you, he, she, it, we, they object pronouns: me, you, him, her, it, us, them direct object My parents to the airport.

First, underline the subjects and circle the objects in the following sentences. Then label each noun either "common" or "proper." Finally, write a checkmark above each pronoun. (Note: Not every sentence contains a pronoun.)

proper common

Italians drive fast cars. commor

1 We love big vans.

4 Rand loves sports cars and his wife loves them, too. Common A man driving a sports car hit our minivan.

I returned the rental car at the airport.

7 A-1 Rental Agency called me about the reservation.

UNIT 5 Lesson 1

Some and any: review

Some and any are indefinite quantitiers. They indicate an indefinite number or amount.

There are some toothbrushes in aisle 2. (We don't know how many.)

They are buying some shaving cream. (We don't know how much.)

Could I get some nail files? (We're not asking for a specific number of nail files.)

Do they have any makeup in this store? (We're not asking specifically how much.)

Be careful to use some and any correctly with count and non-count nouns:

Some: with non-count nouns and plural count nouns in affirmative statements non-count noun plural count noun

We need some sunscreen and some combs. They have some here.

Any: with non-count nouns and plural count nouns in negative statements non-count noun plural count noun

A: She doesn't want any shampoo, and he doesn't need any nail clippers

B: Good! We don't have to buy any, then, I'm out of cash.

Any or some: with count and non-count nouns in questions

Do they need any toothpaste or sunscreen for the trip?

Do we need any razors or toothbrushes?

Remember: Count nouns name things you can count individually. They have singular and plural forms (1 nail file, 3 combs). Non-count nouns name things you cannot count individually. They don't have plural forms. Use containers, quantifiers, and other modifiers to make non-count nouns countable.

a bottle of shampoo / aftershave

a jar of face cream / deodorant

a tube of toothpaste / lipstick

a bar of soap

Indefinite pronouns: something, anything, and nothing

Use something in affirmative statements.

There's something in this box.

Use anything in negative statements.

There isn't anything in the fridge.

is there something we should talk about? Is anything wrong?

Nothing is the equivalent of not anything. Don't use nothing in negative statements.

There isn't anything in the fridge = There's nothing in the fridge. NOT There isn't nothing in the fridge.

Choose the correct indefinite pronoun to complete each sentence.

- 1 I need to go to the store to buy (something) / anything).
- 2 There is (something) I can do to help.
- 3 There isn't (something / anything) you can do to make yourself taller.
- 4 I went on the Internet to find (something) / anything) about how to use sunscreen.

Use to / used to: use and form

The simple past tense can express a past habitual action if there is a reference to a period of time in the past. When I was a kid, I didn't eat vegetables. I still don't today.

Use to and used to also express a past habitual action, but one that is no longer true today.

When I was a kid, I didn't use to eat vegetables. But now I do.

Remember: In yes / no questions and negative statements, use use to NOT used to.

I used to stay up late. Now I don't.

I didn't use to (NOT used to) get up early. Now I do.

Did you use to (NOT used to) go shopping more often?

A On a separate sheet of paper, change each statement into a yes / no question. See page T130 for answers.

Repeated actions in the past: would + base form

You can also use would + the base form of a verb to describe repeated past actions. In this use, would has the same meaning as used to.

When we were young, our parents would go camping with us. (= used to go camping with us.)

Be careful! Use used to, not would, to describe possession, likes and dislikes, situations, or location in the past. | used to have a lot of clothes. NOT I would have a lot of clothes.

My hometown used to be Dakar. NOT My hometown would be Dakar.

I used to be a terrible English student. NOT I would be a terrible English student.

- F If it is possible, complete the sentence with would. If not, use a form of used to.
  - 1 They would go to the beach every Saturday in the summer.
  - 2 | used to have a really large kitchen in my old house.
  - 3 My husband never used to like coffee, but now he can't get enough of it.
  - 4 Almost every evening of our vacation we would eat at a terrific outdoor restaurant.
  - 5 Before the microwave, people would heat up soup on the top of the stove.
  - 6 Sigrid used to be a tour guide, but now she's a professional chef.
  - 7 There used to be three or four Italian restaurants in town, but now there aren't any.

Negative yes / no questions: short answers

Answer negative yes / no questions the same way as you would answer affirmative yes / no questions.

Is Jane a vegetarian?

Yes, she is. / No, she isn't.

Do they have two sons?

Don't they have two sons?

Yes, they do. / No, they don't.

- A Answer each negative question with a short answer. (Use the information for your answer.)
  - 1 A: Isn't Hank a lawyer?
    - B: No, he isn't He's not a lawyer.
  - 2 A: Doesn't Bob have two brothers?
    - B: Yes, he does He has two younger brothers.
  - 3 A: Haven't you been to Siberia before?

    - B: Yes, I am I'm studying English at the institute.
  - 5 A: Wasn't Nancy at the movies last night?
    - B: No, she wasn't. She didn't go to the movies.
  - 6 A: Don't Sachiko and Tomofumi have a car?
    - B: Yes, they do . They own a minivan.

Suggestions with Why don't ...? and Why doesn't ...?

You can make suggestions with both Why don't . . . ? or Why doesn't . . . ?

A: Your daughter looks really cold.

Why doesn't she put on a sweater?

A: Your kids are so nice. Why don't they come and play with mine sometime?

B: Good idea.

B: That would be great.

B On a separate sheet of paper, continue each statement with a suggestion using Why don't ...? or Why doesn't ...? Answers will vary.

- Tell students to scan the list of common intransitive verbs on the right. Tell them to try to attach direct objects to the verbs, such as I arrived on time. I walk to school. Don't fall down.
- Invite students to suggest additional sentences that use transitive verbs; for example, They sold their house last week. For each sentence, ask What is the receiver of the action?

UNIT 7 Lesson 1

Gerunds and infinitives: as subjects, subject complements, and objects

Gerunds (-ing form of a verb) and infinitives (to + base form) function as nouns within sentences.

Gerunds can be subjects, subject complements, or objects.

Painting is my favorite leisure-time activity. (subject)

My favorite activity is painting. (subject complement; usually follows be)

Lenjoy painting, (direct object)

I read a book about the history of painting. (object of the preposition of)

Infinitives can be subjects, subject complements, and direct objects.

To paint well is a talent, (subject)

The only thing he needs is to paint. (subject complement; usually follows be)

I want to paint. (direct object)

Underline the gerunds and circle the infinitives in the following sentences. Then write subject (s), subject complement (c), direct object (do), or object of a preposition (op) on the line next to each one.

- do 1 Lenjoy watching movies every night on DVD.
- do 2 Her greatest dream was to see all of her children attend college.
- op 3 What's the point of creating a nice environment at home if genetics is the only thing that counts?
- S 4 Avoiding too much pressure helps children become less critical.
- do 5 My niece plans to study personality development next semester.

The passive voice: transitive verbs and intransitive verbs

A transitive verb can have a direct object. Transitive verbs can be used in the active voice or passive voice.

active voice

passive voice

Picasso painted Guernica in 1937.

Guernica was painted in 1937.

An intransitive verb cannot have a direct object. With an intransitive verb, there is no "receiver" of an action.

The painting arrives tomorrow.

The Mona Lisa will stay at the Louvre.

That new sculpture seems like a Botero.

Remember: The subject of a sentence performs the action of the verb. A direct object receives the action of the verb.

UNIT 10 Lesson 1

Present factual conditionals: usage

Use the present factual conditional to express general and scientific facts. Use the simple present tense or the present tense of be in both clauses.

If it rains, flights are late. [fact]

If you heat water to 100 degrees, it boils. [scientific fact]

Note: For a review of the concept of clauses, see Units 4 and 6 of the Writing Booster.

In present factual conditional sentences, when (or whenever) is often used instead of if. When (or Whenever) it rains, flights are late.

- A On a separate sheet of paper, write present factual conditional sentences. See page T137 for answers.
  - 1 Water (freeze) when you (lower) its temperature below zero degrees.
  - 2 Whenever my daughter (take) her umbrella to school, she (forget) to bring it home.
  - 3 She (go) on vacation every August if she (not have) too much work.
  - 4 He (run) in the park if the weather (be) dry.

When you heat water to 100 degrees, it boils.

5 In my company, if cashiers (make) a mistake, they have to (repay) the money.

Future factual conditionals: usage and common errors

Use the future factual conditional to express what you believe will happen in the future under certain conditions or as a result of certain actions. Use the simple present tense or the present of be in the if- clause. Use a future form (will or be going to) in the result clause.

If I go to sleep too late tonight, I won't be able to get up on time. (future condition, future result) If she comes home after 8:00, I'm not going to make dinner. (future condition, future result)

Be careful! Don't use a future form in the if-clause.

If I see him, I'll tell him. NOT If I will see him, I'll tell him. NOT If I'm going to see him, I'll tell him.

- B Circle the correct form to complete each future factual conditional sentence.
  - 1 If they (like) / will like) the movie, they (see / will see) it again.
  - 2 I (m going to talk)/ talk) to her if she (does)/ 's going to do) that again.
  - 3 If you (buy) / are going to buy) some eggs, I (make /(II make) you an omelet tonight.
  - 4 If they (see)/ will see) her tomorrow, they (drive /('Il drive) her home.
  - 5 (Are you going to study) Do you study) Italian if they (offer)/ will offer) it next year?

Order of clauses: punctuation

In all conditional sentences, the clauses can be reversed with no change in meaning. In writing, use a comma between the clauses when the if- clause comes first.

If you don't return the bracelet, you'll feel bad.

You'll feel bad if you don't return the bracelet.

- Ask a volunteer to read the first rule in the box. Call on students to say what the subject and verb is in each sentence.
- Read the Remember note aloud. Make sure students understand what capital letter means. If necessary, write uppercase and lowercase examples on the board, such as Hh, Pp, Ll. Review that a period is a form of punctuation. Ask What are other forms of punctuation?
  (Comma, question mark, exclamation point, etc.)

FYI: An exclamation point should only be used at the end of a command or to indicate very strong emotion.

- Write on the board He is walking to school. Ask Is this an independent clause? (Yes. It has a subject and a verb.) Call on a student to circle the verb in the sentence on the board. (Is walking.) Review that the verb shows action in a sentence. Ask What is the subject? (He.) Point out that the sentence expresses a complete idea.
- Write on the board He is walking to school usually he takes the bus. Ask What is wrong with this sentence? (Possible answers: It has more than one complete idea; it has two independent clauses.) Invite a volunteer to read the second and third rules. Ask a volunteer to correct the sentence on the board using the model for ideas. (Separate into two sentences or connect using a comma and but.)
- Finally, have students read the Be careful! note to themselves.

A Write X...

Writing Booster

The Writing Booster is optional. It is intended to teach students the conventions of written English. Each unit's Writing Booster is focused both on a skill and its application to the Writing topic from the Unit Review page.

UNIT 1 Avoiding run-on sentences

An independent clause is a sentence with a subject and a verb.

subject verb

I saw a photo of the mountain.

It looked very high.

In writing, a run-on sentence is when we forget to use a coordinating conjunction, such as and or but, to combine independent clauses.

Run-on sentence X | saw a photo of the mountain it looked very high.

Correct a run-on sentence by (a) using a period to separate it into two sentences, or (b) using a coordinating conjunction to combine the two independent clauses. A comma before the conjunction is optional.

- ✓ I saw a photo of the mountain. It looked very high.
- ✓ I saw a photo of the mountain, and it looked very high.

Be careful! Do not use a comma to combine independent clauses. Use a period to separate them.

Run-on sentence * A new student arrived yesterday; he is from Santos.

✓ A new student arrived yesterday. He is from Santos.

- A Write x if the item contains a run-on sentence. Write √ if the item is written correctly.
  - 1 Ann is Canadian she doesn't speak French.
  - Z They're good students they work very hard.
  - 3 My brother is a lawyer, he lives in Hong Kong.
  - ✓ 4 Victor and Lisa came home late last night. They stayed up until 4:00 A.M.
  - Some people think cities are beautiful I don't agree.

- Guidance for Writing (page 12) After you write about your experience in Exercise D, check carefully to see if you have written any run-on sentences. Use a period to separate the independent clauses or use the coordinating conjunctions and or but to combine them.

  Answers will vary.

Remember: A sentence ...

- begins with a capital letter and ends with a period.
- has a subject and a verb.
- expresses a complete idea.

UNIT 2 The paragraph

A paragraph is a group of sentences that relate to a topic or a theme. When your writing contains sections about a variety of topics, it is a good idea to divide it into separate paragraphs.

When there is more than one paragraph, it is customary, though not required, to include a topic sentence in each paragraph that summarizes or announces the main idea of the paragraph. The other sentences in the paragraph traditionally include details or facts that support the main idea. Using topic sentences makes paragraphs clearer and easier to understand.

In the writing model to the right there are two paragraphs, each beginning with a topic sentence (highlighted in yellow):

In the first paragraph, the topic sentence informs us that the paragraph will contain details about violence in movies "before the 1960s."

In the second paragraph, the topic sentence informs us that the paragraph will shift focus. The word "Today" lets the reader know what the focus of the paragraph will be.

Without the topic sentences, the ideas would run together and be difficult to follow.

Remember: Indent the first word of each new paragraph so readers know that a new section of the writing is beginning.

Before the 1960s, most movies did not show much graphic violence. When fighting or shooting occurred on the screen, it was clean: Bang! You're dead! The victim fell to the ground and died, perhaps after speaking a few final words. The viewer never saw blood or suffering. But in the late 60s, filmmakers such as Arthur Penn and Sam Peckinpah began making movies with more graphic violence, such as Bonnie and Clyde and The Wild Bunch. They believed that if audiences could see how truly horrible real violence was, people would be less violent in their own lives.

Today, special-effects technology has made it possible to create very realistic images of bloodshed and violence. Steven Prince, author of Savage Cinema: Sam Peckinpah and the Rise of Ultraviolent Movies, describes the difference between early movies and the movies of today: "... filmmakers can create any image that they can dream up." So, Prince believes, because of technology, movies today are more and more violent and bloody.

A Choose a topic sentence for each of the following paragraphs.

Some people are worried that viewing a lot of violence in movies and video games can be dangerous. They feel that it can make violence seem normal and can cause people to imitate the violent behavior, doing the same thing themselves. Other people disagree. They believe that showing violence is honest and can even be helpful.

- a Many people say violence in movies can be harmful.
- (b) People have different opinions about how violence can affect viewers.
- c People imitate violent behavior they see in movies.

2

The 1967 Arthur Penn movie is about a real gang of violent bank robbers who terrorized the U.S. Southwest in the 1930s. Bonnie (Faye Dunaway) and Clyde (Warren Beatty), and their gang were believed to be responsible for thirteen deaths and many robberies before they were finally killed.

- (a) Bonnie and Clyde is based on a true story.
- b Arthur Penn is one of the most famous directors of the 1960s.
- c There were a lot of bank robberies in the 1930s.

The U.S. documentary Spellbound visits the homes of eight finalists for the National Spelling Bee and then follows them to the finals in Washington. We get to know the kids and their families.

- a Spelling bees are popular in the U.S., and there have been a number of them in Washington.
- b The finals of the National Spelling Bee take place in Washington.
- c Some documentaries give us an intimate view of people and their lives.

- Have students read the description of a paragraph. To check comprehension, ask:
  - What is a paragraph? (It's a group of sentences about one topic or theme.)
  - What is a topic sentence? (It's a sentence that announces the main idea of a paragraph.)
  - Where in a paragraph is the topic sentence? (It's usually the first sentence.)
- Call on volunteers to read the topic sentences in the two sample paragraphs. Ask What information does each topic sentence give you? (The first paragraph will be about violence in movies before the 1960s; the second paragraph will be about violence in movies today.)
- Tell students to read the model paragraphs to themselves. Then ask Do the supporting sentences in each paragraph support the topic sentences? (Yes.)
- Have a volunteer read the Remember note. If necessary, explain what indent means by pointing out the space at the beginning of the sample paragraphs. Tell students that instead of indenting, some people create paragraphs simply by leaving spaces between blocks of text.

FYI: In a paragraph, the first line is usually indented about five spaces from the left margin.

A Choose a topic sentence . . .

   Write on the board Does your paragraph have a topic sentence? Does it summarize or announce the main idea of your paragraph?
- Ask students to read the questions on the board and then reread their paragraphs.
- Then have pairs exchange paragraphs and comment on their topic sentences and supporting sentences.

C Guidance for Writing

UNIT 3 Avoiding sentence fragments . . .

Suggested	15-20	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

Give students a few minutes to read through the rules in the box. Then write on the board I prefer the Hotel Casablanca because it looks interesting. Explain that I prefer the Hotel Casablanca is an independent clause because it can stand by itself as a sentence. Then ask What is the dependent clause? (Because it looks interesting.) Ask Can the dependent clause stand by itself? (No.) Why? (Because it doesn't express a complete idea.) Point out that a dependent clause depends on another clause.

FYI: Note that since can be used to express time or to give a reason for something. If there is any possibility of confusion between the two uses of since, such as in Since I was young, use because to give reasons.

- Call on a volunteer to read the first rule and example sentence in the box.
- Have students look at the example sentence on the board again. Erase the dependent clause and put it at the beginning of the sentence. Ask Can a dependent clause appear at the beginning of the sentence? (Yes.) Invite a student to read the next rule.
- Read the third rule, which is about sentence fragments. Then write a couple of examples on the board: Because we like to stay at fancy hotels. Since we made a - reservation online, we saved 20%. Ask Which is a complete sentence? (The second one.) Which is a sentence fragment? (The first one.) Erase the second sentence, but keep the sentence fragment on the board.

- Have a student read the last rule and example sentences. Then return to the sentence fragment on the board. Ask How can you make the fragment into a complete sentence? (By adding an independent clause such as We decided on the Royal Plaza.) Point out that the independent clause can be placed before or after the dependent clause.

A In the following paragraph . . .

- Tell students to scan the paragraph for because and since and circle each occurrence they find. Then have students study each use of because and since and underline the sentence fragments.
- Ask Which uses of because or since in the paragraph are correct? (Only the first. The dependent clause is attached to an independent clause.)
- · Call on volunteers to read the four sentence fragments.

B On a separate sheet of paper . . .

- Tell students that the sentence fragments can be corrected in different ways. Move around the room and help students as needed.
- Remind students that a dependent clause has to be connected to an independent clause or rewritten to become an independent clause. Explain that two dependent clauses cannot be connected to make an independent clause.
- Have pairs compare their paragraphs for any outstanding sentence fragments. Suggest solutions.
- Invite students to compare paragraphs and see if they solved the sentence fragments differently.

Answers to Unit 3, Exercise B

When I was a child, I had three very important dreams. Because I was young, I thought they would all come true. The first one was that I wanted to be an architect because I loved modern buildings. Since I wanted to help people, the second dream was to be a doctor. The last one was to be a flight attendant since I liked to travel. Only one of my dreams became a reality. I am an architect today. Because I really love my job, I think it was really the right choice for me.

UNIT 3 Avoiding sentence fragments with because or since

Remember: You can use the subordinating conjunctions because or since to give a reason. Because and since answer the Why question. A clause that begins with because or since is called a dependent clause. A dependent clause gives information about an independent clause.

— independent clause — dependent clause —

I prefer the Hotel Casablanca because (or since) it looks very interesting.

A dependent clause with because or since can also come at the beginning of a sentence. If it comes first, use a comma.

Because it looks very interesting, I prefer the Hotel Casablanca.

In writing, a dependent clause alone is an error called a "sentence fragment." It is not a sentence because it does not express a complete idea. Avoid writing sentence fragments.

Sentence fragment X I prefer the Hotel Casablanca. Because it looks very interesting.

To correct a sentence fragment with because or since, make sure it is combined with an independent clause. Or rewrite the sentence without because or since to create an independent clause.

- ✓ I prefer the Hotel Casablanca because it looks very interesting.
- ✓ I prefer the Hotel Casablanca. It looks very interesting.
- A In the following paragraph, underline four sentence fragments with because or since.

When I was a child, I had three very important dreams. Because I was young, I thought they would all come true. The first one was that I wanted to be an architect. Because I loved modern buildings. Since I wanted to help people. The second dream was to be a doctor. The last one was to be a flight attendant. Since I liked to travel. Only one of my dreams became a reality. I am an architect today. Because I really love my job. I think it was really the right choice for me.

- B On a separate sheet of paper, write the paragraph again. Correct all the sentence fragments.

  Combine the dependent clauses with independent clauses to make complete sentences. See page T141 for answers.
- C Guidance for Writing (page 36) In your paragraph about a hotel in Exercise D, include at least three reasons using because or since. Then check carefully to make sure that there are no sentence fragments. Answers will vary.

UNIT 4 And, In addition, Furthermore, and Therefore

And

And connects two or more words in a series. Use commas to separate words when there are more than two in the series. (The last comma is optional.)

I'm concerned about aggressive and inattentive driving. (no comma: and connects two adjectives.)

Inattentive drivers sometimes eat and talk on their cell phones while they are driving. (no comma: and connects two verbs of the same subject.)

Gesturing, staring, and multitasking are three things aggressive drivers often do. (A comma is necessary: and connects more than two words in a series. The comma after staring is optional.)

And can also combine two separate complete sentences into one sentence. In the new sentence, the two original sentences are called "independent clauses." The comma is common but optional.

Aggressive drivers do many dangerous things, and they cause a lot of crashes.

- A Insert commas where necessary or optional in the following sentences.
  - 1 She enjoys swimming, hiking, and fishing.
- 4 Marianne and Sally are coming with us.
- 2 I don't like SUVs and other large cars.
- 5 I'm renting a car, and I'm driving it to Chicago.
- 3 We're traveling to France, Italy, and Spain.
- 6 This agency has nice convertibles, vans, and sports cars.
- B On a separate sheet of paper, combine each pair of sentences into one sentence consisting of two independent clauses. Use and. See page T142 for answers.
  - 1 They made a call to a car rental company. They reserved a mini-van for the weekend.
  - 2 The left front headlight is broken. It won't turn on.
  - 3 We rented a full-size sedan with a sun roof. We opened it because the weather was beautiful.
  - 4 I hit the car in front of me. A passenger in the back seat was hurt.
  - 5 You can drop the car off at nine o'clock. You can pick it up in the late afternoon.

In addition, Furthermore, and Therefore

Use In addition and Furthermore to add to the ideas in a previous sentence. In addition and Furthermore are approximately equal in meaning, but Furthermore is a little more formal. You can use both in the same writing to avoid a repetitive style.

People should pay attention to their own driving. In addition, they should be aware of the driving of others. I think defensive driving makes sense. Furthermore, it has been proven to reduce the number of accidents.

Therefore introduces a result.

result ----

Ron has had a lot of accidents. Therefore, the rental company said he couldn't rent one of their cars.

Note: It's customary to use a comma after In addition, Furthermore, and Therefore.

- Complete the statements with In addition or Therefore.
  - 1 The other driver was speeding. In addition, she wasn't paying attention.
  - 2 No one was hurt. Therefore, we didn't have to go to the hospital after the crash.
  - 3 I was taking a business trip with a lot of equipment. Therefore, I rented a car with a lot of trunk space.
  - 4 They need to rent a mini-van for their trip to Montreal. In addition, they have to stay in a pet-friendly hotel because they plan to bring their pet dog.
- D Guidance for Writing (page 48) In your paragraph about good and bad drivers in Exercise E, use And, In addition, Furthermore, and Therefore. Then check your paragraph carefully to see if you have used commas to separate words correctly. Answers will vary.

And

- Call on a student to read the first rule and example sentence in the box. Write the first example sentence on the board and have a student circle the adjectives connected by and. (Aggressive, inattentive.) Stress that when and connects two words, a comma is not needed.
- Write the next example sentence on the board. Ask What is the subject? (Inattentive drivers.) What is the verb? (There are two: eat, talk.)
- Read the third example sentence aloud. Ask What does and connect in this sentence? (Three words: gesturing, staring, multitasking.) Ask Why are there commas? (Because there are more than two words in the series.) Stress that the comma after the second word is optional. Explain that it is a style preference.

FYI: When and joins the last two items in a series and a comma appears before and, this is called a serial comma.

 Finally, have students read the last rule to review that and can be used to connect two independent clauses.

A Insert commas where necessary . . .

- Tell students to circle and in each sentence and underline the words it connects. Then have them complete the exercise.
- Bring the class together and ask Which sentences need commas? (Sentences 1, 3, and 6 need two or three commas, depending on your style preference; sentence 5 needs a comma because and connects two independent clauses.) Ask Why don't the other sentences need commas? (Because and only connects two words.)

Option: [+5 minutes] Have students identify the words being connected in each sentence. (1: gerunds; 2, 3, 4 and 6: nouns: 5: yerbs.)

B On a separate sheet of paper . . .

- After students have completed the exercise, have them check that each independent clause has a subject and verb
- Then have students compare their answers with a partner.
- Bring the class together and ask Did you put a comma before and? Reiterate that the comma is optional.
- Have students suggest additional ways to combine the pairs of sentences. Tell them that they don't need to have two independent clauses in the combined sentence.
   More than one answer will be possible.

Answers to Unit 4. Exercise B

Answers may vary but might include the following:

- They made a call to a car rental company, and they reserved a minivan for the weekend.
- The left front headlight is broken, and it won't turn on.
- 3. We rented a full-sized sedan with a sun roof, and we opened it because the weather was beautiful.
- I hit the car in front of me, and a passenger in the back seat was hurt.
- I can drop the car off at nine o'clock, and you can pick it up in the late afternoon.

In addition, Furthermore, and Therefore

- Have students read the first rule in the box to themselves. Then call on volunteers to read the example sentences aloud. Ask Can we use furthermore in the first sample sentence? (Yes.) Can we use in addition in the second sample sentence? (Yes.) How do the sentences change? (Using furthermore in a sentence makes it a little more formal.)
- Read the second rule and example sentence. Ask Can we replace therefore with in addition or furthermore? (No.) Why not? (Therefore has a different meaning; it introduces a result.)
- · Read the note regarding punctuation.

Complete the statements . . .

- On the board write Does the sentence introduce a result? Does the sentence add ideas? Tell students to refer to these questions when choosing the correct answer
- Ask Is more than one answer possible for any item? (No.)

D Guidance for Writing

- On the board write and, in addition, furthermore, and therefore. Review that and connects two or more words in a series, in addition and furthermore add ideas, and therefore introduces a result. Encourage students to use these words in their paragraphs about good and bad drivers.
- When they are finished, tell students to read their paragraphs and underline all the uses of and.
- Ask Did you use commas to separate more than two words in a series? Have students make necessary corrections.
- Then have students work in pairs to read their partner's paragraph and see if he or she missed any commas.
   Remind students that the comma before and is optional.
   Encourage pairs to offer suggestions. Move around the room and help students as needed.
- · Collect students' work and give feedback.

UNIT 5 Conventions of formal letter writing

Suggested 20–30 Your actual teaching time: minutes teaching time:

- Ask students to close their books. Write on the board Formal letters. Ask How are formal letters different from e-mails or handwritten social notes? (Possible responses: They are more formal in tone. You don't use abbreviations or emoticons in formal letters. You are more careful with grammar and spelling.) Ask In what situations might you write a formal letter? (Possible responses: To apply for a job, to request a service, to file a complaint.)
- Have students open their books and call on a volunteer to read the rules in the box. Make sure students understand that the recipient is the person receiving the letter.
- Give students a few minutes to study and read the sample letter. Have them look at the labels carefully.
- Bring the class together. Ask What is the complimentary close in the letter? (Sincerely.) Have students read the note with the other common complimentary closes.
- Ask Does the writer of the letter know the recipient's name? (No, she just addresses the letter to the manager of the spa.) How does she write the salutation? (Dear Sir or Madam.) Then ask a student to read the note in the box. Have pairs write formal salutations to each other.

A Think of a business . . .

 Have students work in small groups. Give them a few minutes to discuss their ideas and make notes.

B On a separate sheet of paper . . .

- Using their notes, have students write their letters. Point out that their letters should be more formal in nature than the response letters on page 56. Tell them to refer to the letter in this section for a model.
- After students write their letters, have them use the bulleted list in the box as a checklist. Tell students to make any necessary corrections needed.
- Students can handwrite their first drafts. If possible, encourage students to type their second drafts.
- · Collect students' work and give feedback.

FYI: Unless and if... not can both be used to say that what you will do depends on something else happening: Unless Brad comes soon, I'm going without him. I if Brad does not come soon, I'm going without him.

C Guidance for Writing

- Give students a few minutes to read the directions silently. Make sure that they understand that the original letters on page 56 don't all list three advantages and disadvantages. Students will have to supply the missing information.
- Allow students a few minutes to take notes on the notepad, listing methods, advantages, and disadvantages about improving one's appearance.
   (Possible responses for losing weight: A method could be exercise; the advantage could be that it's inexpensive; the disadvantage could be that it's difficult to stay on track with any exercise routine.)
- When students have finished writing, have them work in pairs and read their partner's letter. Have them check for name, address, the date, a salutation, and a complimentary close as well as correct use of commas.

UNIT 5 Conventions of formal letter writing

E-mails and handwritten social notes are informal ways to communicate with others. They don't have many rules. Formal letters, such as business letters, are generally typed and have conventions and rules. For these, be sure to include the following elements:

- · your address
- · the recipient's name (and / or position) and address
- · the date of the letter
- a salutation
- a complimentary close
- · your typewritten name and your handwritten signature

Note: If you know the recipient's name, the salutation should use the following format: Dear [title + last name].

It's common in a formal letter to use a colon (:) after the name. In less formal letters, a comma is appropriate.

Dear Mr. Smith:

Dear Marie.

If you don't know the recipient's name or gender, use this format:

Dear Sir or Madam: OR

To whom it may concern:

Follow the layout and punctuation in the writing model to the right.

The hair stylist gave me a wonderful haircut and the facialist was really top notch. I particularly enjoyed the relaxing music that played over the public address system. Finally, the prices were fair, and I left the spa feeling great.

I want you to know that I am recommending the Tipton Spa to all my friends and have told them that they should visit you even if they are staying in another hotel or if they are in Sylvania for the day. - Write subordinating conjunctions on the board. Ask students for examples and refer them to the list at the top right of the page. Review that subordinating conjunctions connect an independent clause to a dependent clause. Have students read the first two rules and example sentences to themselves.
- Have volunteers read the rule about if and unless aloud. Explain that an if- or unless- clause is paired with a result clause that describes what will happen under that condition. Ask Which clause is dependent? (The if- clause—it can't stand alone.) Which clause is independent? (The result clause—it can stand alone.) Have students read the example sentences.
- Read the next rule to the class. Invite volunteers to read the sentences using the words Although, Even though, and Though. Ask students to state the sentence in a different way to express contradiction. (Possible answer:
  People know that fatty foods are unhealthy, but they eat them anyway.)

A Choose the best . . .

- Write the following on the board:
  - Does the sentence
  - -qive a reason? (because, since)
  - rexpress a contradiction? (although, even though)
  - rexpress a condition? (if, unless)
- Tell students to refer to the questions to help them decide which subordinating conjunction to use.
- Have students compare their answers with a partner.
   Then bring the class together and answer any questions.

B Read each sentence...

- Have students skim the exercise, Ask Are these dependent or independent clauses? (They're independent—they express complete thoughts.) Tell students to look at the context and create dependent clauses. Remind students that if and unless express a condition, because gives a reason, and although expresses a contradiction.
- As students complete the exercise, move around the room and provide help as needed.
- · Review students' answers with the class.

Guidance for Writing

- On the board, write Do you think people are eating healthier or less healthy foods than they used to?
- Tell students to take notes and write sentences about eating habits: two about the past and two about the present. Write because, since, if, unless, although on the board for students to refer to.
- After students write their paragraphs, have them check their papers for the correct use and punctuation of subordinating conjunctions.
- · Collect students' work and give feedback.

UNIT 7 Parallel structure

Suggested 15–20 Your actual teaching time: minutes teaching time:

- Read the introduction to parallel structure. Have students read the example sentences. Point out that all items in the list are gerunds. Read the Be careful! note. Ask How would you correct that sentence? (Change the infinitive to play to a gerund or change the gerunds painting and dancing to infinitives.)
- On the board, write He spends a lot of time listening to music, texting his friends, and surfing the web. Ask Does the sentence have parallel structure? (Yes.) Have students underline the parallel structures. (Listening, texting, surfing.)
- Ask a student to read the second rule and example sentences. Then read the Remember note. On the board, write This summer I would like to ... Invite volunteers to come to the board and write three things they would like to do this summer. Remind students to repeat to with each verb or only to mention it the first time. After volunteers complete their sentences, have students comment as to whether the parallel structure is correct.
- Read the Remember note and example sentence to the students to review punctuation of items in a series. Refer to students' sentences on the board to illustrate comma use when listing three items.

A Correct the errors . . .

- Have students circle the verb in each sentence and underline the items in the series. Then have them identify the mistakes in the sentences.
- Have students compare their answers in pairs. Move around the room and help students as needed.

- When students have finished, tell them to return to their answers and underline any series of items. Refer them to the Be careful! note to check for correct structure, and then ask them to make any necessary corrections.
- Finally, have students use the information in their answers to write their paragraphs.

UNIT 7 Parallel structure

When writing a series of words or phrases in a sentence, be sure that all items in the series are in the same grammatical form. This feature of good writing is called parallel structure.

parallel structure (all items in the series are gerunds)

Lucy is creative. She likes painting, playing the piano, and writing.

Be careful! Don't combine gerunds and infinitives in the same series.

Don't write: Lucy is creative. She likes painting, to play the piano, and writing.

In a series of infinitives, it is correct to use  $\underline{to}$  before each item in the series or to use  $\underline{to}$  only before the first item.

- ✓ I decided to study medicine, to get married, and to have children before my thirtieth birthday.
- ✓ I decided to study medicine, get married, and have children before my thirtieth birthday.
- X I decided to study medicine, get married, and to have children before my thirtieth birthday.

Remember: When a sentence includes a series of more than two words or phrases, separate them with commas. Use and before the last item in the series. The comma before and is optional.

no comma (two items)

A Correct the errors in parallel structure in the following sentences.

  1 I have begun studying psychology and to learn about personality development.
- 2 They continue arguing about the nature-nurture controversy and to disagree about which is more important.
- 3 The Bersons love to run, to swim, and lift weights.
- 4 She's both responsible and social. She prefers to study early in the evening and going out afterwards.
- 5 Introverts hate to talk about their feelings and being with a lot of people.
- 6 Marjorie is a classic extrovert. She likes to be very active, knowing a lot of people, and to seek excitement.
- 7 To be quiet, be hard to know, and to seek peace are traits typical of the introvert's personality.

- B Guidance for Writing (page 84) On a separate sheet of paper, write sentences to answer some or all the following questions about a person you know well. If appropriate, use verbs and phrases from the lists below. Be careful to use parallel structure. Use the sentences in your paragraphs about a person in Exercise E. Answers will vary.

  - · What is the person's relation to you?
  - · Who are the people in the person's family?
  - · How many siblings does the person have?

UNIT 8 Supporting details

Remember: A good paragraph has a topic sentence that states clearly what the main idea of the paragraph is.

In addition, a paragraph should have supporting details—that is, information that provides support for, and is clearly tied to, the topic sentence.

Be careful! If a detail doesn't support the topic sentence or isn't tied to it clearly, then it may not belong in the paragraph.

In the writing model to the right, the topic sentence of the paragraph is highlighted in yellow. The sentences that follow are details. Two of the sentences are crossed out because they do not support the topic sentence and should not be included in the paragraph. These two sentences do not provide information about the chair and do not indicate why the writer likes the chair. The remaining sentences are supporting details—they all support the topic sentence and are clearly tied to it. They provide more information about the chair and they explain why the writer likes the chair.

In my living room, I have many things.

My favorite possession is an old wooden chair. My parents gave it to me when I left home. A wooden chair can be very expensive if it is an antique. It has lots of memories for me because it was in my parent's bedroom when I was growing up. It's important to take very good care of wooden furniture. The chair is very comfortable, and I used to sit in it a lot as a child.

A Read each topic sentence. Circle the detail that does not support the topic sentence.

- 1 Many French artists in the nineteenth century were influenced by Japanese art and printmaking.

- Give students a few minutes to read the information and the sample paragraph. Then read the Remember and Be careful! notes aloud to the class. Refer students to the highlighted and crossed out portions of the paragraph as you read about them.
- Give students a few minutes to read the paragraph again.
   Review by asking Why are the two sentences crossed out?
   (They do not support the topic sentence or show why the writer likes the chair.)

A Read each topic sentence . . .

- Have students complete the exercise in pairs. Encourage them to discuss which details best support the topic sentence. Move around the room and help students as needed.
- Bring the class together and review answers. Have students explain why one of the details does not support the topic sentence; for example, 1. Option a talks about Japan's most famous printmaker today—there is no mention of Japanese artists' influence on French artists in the nineteenth century.

B Guidance for Writing

- Call on volunteers to say what they will write about.
   Then invite students to reread the paragraph on page 146 about the chair and pay attention to the topic sentence and supporting details.
- Then have students work on filling out the outline on the notepad. Move around the room and help them as needed. Make sure all students have a clear topic sentence.
- Give students a few minutes to reread their supporting details. Tell them to cross out any sentences that do not support the topic sentence. Then tell them to replace any crossed-out sentences with ones that do support the topic sentence. Students will use this information in their paragraphs.
- If appropriate for your class, have pairs exchange outlines and offer each other feedback.

- Focus on Approach 1. Have students read the information. Explain that the handwritten notes are just ideas that a writer would then organize into a paragraph. This writer would list the advantages first and then the disadvantages.
- Read the information after Approach 1 to the class and have students read Approach 2. Explain that the highlighted sentences are examples of topic sentences.

UNIT 9 Organizing ideas

When you want to describe the benefits and problems of an issue, there are different ways you can organize your ideas. Here are some approaches.

Approach 1: In one paragraph

One way is to describe all the advantages and disadvantages in one paragraph. Following are notes of the details that will be included in the paragraph.

THE ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF CELL PHONES

Advantages: are easy to carry, don't miss calls, keep you connected with family and friends

Disadvantages: bother other people, make people dependent, are easy to lose

This approach is good for a short piece of writing consisting of only a few sentences. However, if you want to develop those ideas in more than just a few sentences, it is easier for the reader to follow if you can organize the details in one of the following ways.

Approach 2: In two paragraphs

In this approach, you can use a first paragraph to describe all the advantages. Then you can use a second paragraph to describe all the disadvantages. Following are notes of the details that will be included in each paragraph.

Par	agraph 1: CELL PHONES HAVE ADVANTAGES are easy to carry, don't miss calls, keep you connected with family and friends
Para	agraph 2: BUT THEY ALSO HAVE DISADVANTAGES bother other people, make people dependent, are easy to lose

Approach 3: In two or more paragraphs

In this approach, you can use a separate paragraph to focus on each different topic. In each paragraph, you can describe both advantages and disadvantages. Following are notes of the details that will be included in each paragraph.

Paragraph 1: (THEY'RE SMALL.) cell phones easy to carry, but also easy to lose

Paragraph 2: (THEY'RE CONVENIENT.) won't miss calls, but you can also bother other people

Paragraph 3: (THEY'VE CHANGED OUR LIVES.) keep people connected with family and friends, but also can make people dependent

- A Below are ideas for a piece of writing about renting a car during a vacation overseas. Using Approach 2, you can organize the ideas into two paragraphs, one about the benefits of renting and one about the problems. Write 1 next to the sentences that belong in paragraph 1. Write 2 next to the sentences that belong in paragraph 2.
  - 1 It gives you the freedom to go wherever you want to go whenever you want.
  - 1 There are advantages and disadvantages to renting a car while you're on vacation overseas.
  - 1 You might see places you can't see by bus or train.
  - 2 You could have an accident during your trip.
  - 1 You have more control over whether or not you will have an accident during your trip.
  - 1 You can carry more luggage and other things you might need.

- 2 To drive safely, you have to become familiar with the local driving rules.
- 1 If you're traveling with a group of people, it could cost less than paying for bus and train tickets.
- 2 You may have to understand road signs that are in a different language.
- 2 If you have to do all the driving, it can be very stressful and tiring.
- 2 If you're traveling alone or with one other person, it could cost a lot of money in rental fees and gas.
- B Now, on a separate sheet of paper, practice using Approach 3. Choose sentences from Exercise A that you can organize into two or more separate topics.
- C Guidance for Writing (page 108) Use your notes on page 107 to write your paragraphs in Exercise E about the benefits and problems of the Internet. Choose Approach 2 or Approach 3 to organize your writing. Answers will vary.

UNIT 10 Introducing conflicting ideas: On the one hand; On the other hand

Use On the one hand and On the other hand to present conflicting ideas or two sides of an issue. The following two sentences present the two sides together, one right after the other.

On the one hand, I would want to tell the truth. On the other hand, I wouldn't want to get in trouble.

Remember: You can also present conflicting or contradictory information with Even though, Although, and However.

Even though I'm basically an honest person, I don't always tell the truth. Although Matt didn't think he broke the dish, it's possible that he did. Matt wanted to tell the owner of the store what happened. However, Noah didn't agree.

When one paragraph presents one side of an issue and the next one presents the other, writers don't usually use On the one hand in the first paragraph. Instead, they just begin the next paragraph with On the other hand to let the reader know that the conflicting idea will follow. Look at the writing model to the right.

Being honest has many advantages. If you always tell the truth, you don't have to remember an untruth you said before. People who tell the truth don't have trouble sleeping. They can look at themselves in the mirror and feel good.

On the other hand, there are times when telling a lie makes sense. For example, if a friend asks you what you think of a new piece of clothing and you hate it, telling him or her that you think it's ugly would be very hurtful. It's possible that not being absolutely truthful might make more sense.

- A Reread the Photo Story on page 111. Write a summary of the story in three to five sentences. Answer the questions below. Answers will vary.
  - Where was Matt?
- What happened?
- Who was he with?What did the two friends discuss?
- B Answer the questions below. Write three to five sentences about Matt's choices. Then write the consequences of each choice. Use If and the unreal conditional in at least one sentence. Answers will vary.
  - What should he do?
- What could he do?
- · What would most people do?

Answers will vary.

- C Write three to five sentences about what you would do if you were Matt. Answer the questions below.

  - What would you do?
     What would happen if you did that?
- What would happen if you didn't?
- D Guidance for Writing (page 120) In your paragraphs about Matt's dilemma in Exercise E, use On the one hand, On the other hand, Even though, Although, and However to connect conflicting ideas. Answers will vary.

A Below are ideas . . .

• To help students visualize the expected organization of their writing, write the following on the board:

Renting a car during a vacation overseas

Paragraph 1: Benefits

Paragraph 2: Disadvantages

- Tell students to organize the list of ideas in the book into the two categories. Model the activity by choosing the topic sentence with the class. (There are advantages and disadvantages to renting a car while you're on vacation overseas.) They will write 1 for sentences that describe the benefits of renting a car, and 2 for sentences that describe the disadvantages of renting a car.
- · Review answers with the class.

B Now, on a separate sheet of paper . . .

- Have students work in pairs to organize the ideas about renting a car during a vacation overseas into two or more paragraphs. Encourage them to think of mini-topics for the separate paragraphs, such as cost, safety, and stress.
   Tell pairs to look at the model (Approach 3) on page 147.
- Tell pairs they don't have to write out the paragraphs but just have to organize their notes like the sample presented. Move around the room and help students as needed.

C Guidance for Writing

- On the board write Benefits and Problems of the Internet. Tell students they will organize their notes on page 107 into two or more paragraphs. Tell students to look through their notes and study Approaches 2 and 3 to decide which one will work best to organize their ideas.
- Tell students to organize their notes like the sample given. Move around the room and help students as needed. Check in with each student to offer input.
- Have students write out the paragraphs for homework. Focus individual feedback on organization of ideas.

UNIT 10 Introducing conflicting ideas . . .

Suggested	20-30	Your actual
teaching time:	minutes	teaching time:

- Begin by explaining the idiom on the one hand... on the other hand. Use actual hand gestures to explain that this is an expression you say when presenting two different ways of thinking about a situation. Give an example, such as On the one hand [hold out your left hand], my new job will give me new opportunities to grow; on the other hand [hold out your right hand], I'll spend a lot more hours working.
- Invite a student to read the first rule and example sentences. Write on the board On the one hand,.../
  On the other hand,...Invite volunteers to share some contrasting opinions on the topic of telling the truth.
- Read the Remember note. Ask a volunteer to restate the first example sentence using Even though, Although, or However. (Possible response: I want to tell the truth; however, I don't want to get into trouble.)

• Read the last rule. Then ask volunteers to read the two paragraphs on the right aloud.

A Reread the Photo Story . . .

- Have students answer the questions in pairs. Then have them write the summaries individually.
- Tell pairs to swap summaries and respond. Move around the room and help students as needed.

B Answer the questions . . .

- To help students take notes, write the following questions on the board:
  - What could Matt do? (Possible response: Put the broken plate on the shelf.)
  - What should Matt do? (Possible response: Tell the owner.)
  - What would most people do? (Possible response: Put the plate on the shelf.)
  - If Matt puts the plate back on the shelf ...
  - If Matt doesn't tell the owner about the plate ...
- Move around the room and help students as needed.
   Then bring the class together and call on students to share their points of view.

C Write three to five sentences . . .

- On the board, write If I were Matt, I would ... Call on volunteers to share their ideas. Correct any mistakes in the usage of the unreal conditional.
- Tell students to write a few sentences describing what they would do if they were Matt and to describe the consequences of these unreal actions.

D Guidance for Writing

- Tell students to refer to their notes from the previous exercises and write two paragraphs about Matt's dilemma. Tell students to use the language they learned to introduce conflicting ideas. Remind students that if they choose to present one side of the story in one paragraph and the other side in the second paragraph, they should follow the model paragraphs in the book and begin the second paragraph with On the other hand.
- Have pairs exchange their paragraphs and compare their ideas.
- Give individual feedback, focusing on introducing conflicting ideas.

Which person thinks that violence in movies is OK sometimes? (Stephan)

When does Stephan think that violence in movies is OK? (when the violence helps the plot along and when there's a point to the violence)

How does Stephan decide what movies to see? (He chooses films that get good reviews and films by filmmakers he likes.)

Does Joe think violent movies are dangerous? Why? (No, he thinks people are dangerous, not movies.)

EXTENSION

Oral work

- Pair work. Have students work in pairs to discuss which interviewees they agree or disagree with.
   Have them explain why. Then bring the class together and ask students' opinions. Encourage students to refer to movies they have seen to support their points of view.
- Discussion. Ask students How do you decide what movies to see? Have individual students share their answers with the class.

Written work

- Pair work. Have students work in pairs to write summaries of what each interviewee said.
- Have each student choose one interviewee and write a paragraph explaining why he/she agrees or disagrees with the interviewee's point of view.

LANGUAGE NOTES: To portray violence "graphically" means to show a lot of blood, killing, and so on.

To help the plot along means to keep the story moving.

"A point to" the violence means that there is "a purpose for" showing the violence.

Turns me off means I don't like it.

To tend to do something means to usually do something.

To sway means to influence.

Movies "of that nature" means "those kinds of" movies.

To have good judgment skills means to be able to tell right from wrong.

OOPS! San says that children should not see violent movies because "they're a little more influential and don't have the judgment skills that adults do." She misuses the word influential, which means having an influence on others. What she means to say is that children are "more easily influenced" by violent movies than adults.

VIDEO SCRIPT

Interviewer: Do you have a favorite genre of movie?

Emma: I love drama. I love comedy, but my favorite is drama.

Interviewer: Do you think there's too much violence in movies?

Stephan: I think sometimes some films portray violence a little too graphically, but I feel that if it helps the plot along, and there's sort of a point to the violence, then it's OK, but unnecessary violence really turns me off.

Interviewer: So do you choose to go see movies if you know they're going to be violent?

Stephan: I usually tend to see films that get good reviews or are by filmmakers whom I admire. I don't think violence would really, you know, sway me one way or the other.

Interviewer: Do you ever go to see violent movies yourself?

Joe: Yes, I've seen violent movies-thrillers and movies of that nature.

Interviewer: Can violent movies be dangerous? Joe: I think people are dangerous. I don't know that movies are dangerous.

Interviewer: Should children be allowed to see violent movies?

Emma: No. I don't think children need to be watching violent movies.

Interviewer: What's your feeling about violence? Is it harmful, particularly to children?

San: It is. I think violence is harmful, especially in movies. Movies . . . children of certain ages should not see violent movies because they're a little more influential and don't have the judgment skills that adults do.

Mr. Evans: Hello, Top Notch Travel. One moment please.

Hello, Top Notch. Just a moment please. Top Notch. Hold please.

Hello. Hi, Mrs. Beatty. Cheryl? I'm afraid Cheryl's not here. You're not satisfied with your hotel? No bellman? I'm sorry. Cheryl will call you back. OK. Good-bye.

Hello? Yes, hello, Mr. Rashid. Cheryl's not here. Can I take a message? You want a cheaper hotel in Budapest—a hotel without breakfast is OK. Very good. I'll give Cheryl your message. Good-bye.

Hello? Oh, hi, Ms. Novak. She'll be right back. Is there a message? Can your cat stay with you at your hotel in Rio? And you'd like to reserve a king-size bed. I'll ask her to check and call you. Bye-bye.

(Cheryl enters.)

Oh! You're back. I have three messages for you. Let's see. Mrs. Beatty wants a cheaper cat. Mr. Rashid isn't satisfied with his breakfast. And Ms. Novak thinks the bellman needs a kingsize bed. They'll explain it all to you.

Mrs. Beatty: Hello?

Cheryl: Hello, Mrs. Beatty? This is Cheryl from Top Notch. How's Los Angeles?

Mrs. Beatty: Well, the hotel isn't very nice, dear. Cheryl: I'm sorry to hear that. Are you OK? You sound tired.

Mrs. Beatty: My room is on the fifth floor. I had to walk up-with my luggage.

Cheryl: There's no bellman? No elevator?

Mrs. Beatty: No. And I wanted a non-smoking room with a king-size bed.

Cheryl: And I requested that for you.

Mrs. Beatty: Well, they gave me a smoking room with a twin-size bed. It's all they have.

Cheryl: I'd better check your reservation. What hotel are you at?

Mrs. Beatty: The Candle Inn, I think. And another thing. They didn't make up the room. The towels are dirty.

Cheryl: Did you call housekeeping?

Mrs. Beatty: They're not answering. And there are all these students everywhere. I thought you said that movie stars stay at this hotel.

Cheryl: Mrs. Beatty, your reservation is for the Chandler Inn. You're in the wrong hotel. The Chandler Inn is a much nicer hotel.

Mrs. Beatty: Oh! Well! I'd better call a taxi.

Cheryl: How will you get your bags to the front

Mrs. Beatty: I'm sure I can find a student to help. I'll say I'm a movie star. I'll be fine.

Cheryl: OK. Good luck. Mrs. Beatty: Good-bye.

According to Christiane, what makes a hotel special? (the people who work there)

Who once brought flowers to Christiane's hotel room? (a bellman)

Did the flowers make Christiane's stay at the hotel even more pleasant? (yes)

Did Chris talk about a good or bad hotel experience? (bad)

Why did Chris say noisy hotel neighbors are unpleasant? (It is a distraction, and this is bad especially when you have to get up early in the morning.)

VIDEO SCRIPT

Interviewer: Could you tell me some of the things that are important to you in a hotel, such as a fitness center or a pool or gift shop or restaurant, a business center?

James: I look more for location in a hotel than anything else. I want to be close and convenient to whatever I'm doing in town. If I'm there to enjoy myself, for example, then I want to be near the beach. So location's more important to me than anything else.

Blanche: I don't pay too much attention to the hotel.

Herb: She likes one bed. She doesn't like twin beds.

Blanche: I'm not a big fan of hotels. If they have . . . if they're comfortable, I'm happy Interviewer: When you stay in a hotel, do you use room service?

Chris: No. I try not to use room service because I like to go out and see a little bit of the town or the city I'm staying in.

Interviewer: Thinking about a really good hotel experience, could you tell me about that?

Christiane: Really what makes the hotel special is the people who work there. If people there are very nice and friendly, and people say "Good morning" and know you by name and they . . . when you come back to the hotel . . . they greet you and they ask you how your day was, and they just make the difference. If . . . when I stayed in a hotel I had . . . I had a bellman bring me flowers that were left over and put them in my room, and those are those little touches that I think make your experience or your stay in a hotel much more pleasant than when you just stay anywhere else.

Interviewer: How about a worst hotel experience?

Chris: Well, I have had experiences, on more than one occasion, where I've been in a room next to people that are rather noisy and so that can be . . . that can be a distraction, especially when you've got to be up early in the morning.

ANSWER KEY

A. 1. b 2. c 3. a 4. d

B. They ask about your day. They say "Good morning." They know your name. They are nice and friendly.

C. Following are expected answers. Students may produce variations that are also correct.

1. There were extra flowers left over at the hotel, and the bellman put them in her room. The people in the next room were noisy.

In the café, Paul describes a car accident he just had to Bob, Cheryl, and Marie.

Paul: Hello.

Marie: Paul, what happened to you? Paul: I had an accident with the van.

Cheryl: Oh, no! Are you OK?

Paul: I'm fine. I was wearing my seat belt. No one was hurt, but I think we're going to need a new van.

Bob: What happened?

Paul: I was driving on Sixth Street and there were a lot of fish on the road.

Marie: A lot of what?

Paul: Fish.

Marie: Why were there fish in the road?

Paul: I don't know. Anyway, I tried to turn but I had a problem with the steering wheel.

Bob: The steering wheel broke?

Paul: No, it came off. So I drove over the fish. The fish made the road slippery, so when I tried to stop, I hit a parked car.

Bob: Oh, no!

Paul: I'm not finished. The car behind me was tailgating, so he hit me. A car on the opposite side of the road hit a stop sign. The stop sign fell and smashed my hood.

Cheryl: Oh, no!

Paul: Then, worst of all, when I got out to look at the damage, a piano fell on the van.

Marie: What? Where did it come from?

Paul: I don't know. But the van does not look good. The bumpers are damaged. So is the hood. The doors won't open. The windows won't close. The engine's not working. The headlights are smashed. The horn won't honk. And it smells like fish.

Bob: Are there any parts that are OK?
Paul: The steering wheel still looks good.
Bob: Great. All we need is a van to go with it.

 Have students name different colors and write them on the board. Ask individual students What is your favorite color? Which colors make you feel happy? Which colors make you feel sad? Have students answer using the colors on the board.

REVIEW

 Ask comprehension questions. Play the video episode again if necessary.

Does Bob like the colors Cheryl is showing him? (no) How do all the colors make Paul feel? (happy) How do all the colors make Marie feel? (sad) What does Bob want Cheryl to do? (He wants her to leave the walls the way they are.) What does Cheryl ask Bob to do? (She asks Bob to find a color everyone likes.)

Does Bob find a color? (yes) What color is it? (green)

Does Cheryl want to paint her apartment green? (no) Why not? (because her sofa is green) What does Bob tell Cheryl to do? (He tells her to change the color of the sofa to yellow—the current color of the walls.)

colors.

Marie: Sad.

Cheryl: Quit complaining. How about this one?

Paul: Happy. Marie: Sad.

Bob: Awful. I can't stand looking at it. Do you plan to do this all night?

Cheryl: This one? Be sure to look carefully.

Marie: Sad. Paul: Happy.

Bob: Very, very nervous. Cheryl: Nervous about what?

Bob: I'm nervous you're going to paint the whole wall that color.

Cheryl: It's my apartment, Bob.

Bob: Yeah, but we come here a lot. Can we discuss leaving the walls just like this?

Cheryl: I'm tired of looking at yellow walls.

Bob: Fine. Can you at least choose a color we'll all be excited about?

Cheryl: There is no color you all like. Paul's feeling happy about everything, Marie's feeling sad about everything, and you just seem to hate color, don't you Bob?

Bob: I love color. Just not those colors.

Cheryl: OK. Then why don't you find a color that everybody likes?

Bob: What do you think of this color?

Paul: I like it.

Marie: I like it too, actually.

Bob: I love it.

Cheryl: I'm not painting the walls the same color as my sofa. The whole room would be green.

Interviewer: Would you say you're a computer addict?

Deepti: Yes. I am a computer addict.

Interviewer: How about just overall time spent on the computer?

Angelique: I think it kind of depends on what you use the time for. 'Cause if you're doing, you know, researching projects and things like that, spend as much time as you like on the computer, you know, 'cause it's easy and it's fast.

Interviewer: But how about games and surfing and chat?

Interviewer: Do you think children should be allowed to use the Internet?

Deepti: With guidance, I think they should be allowed to use the Internet.

Interviewer: What do you see as the advantages of the Internet?

James: Well, communication is certainly an advantage. With, like I said, with e-mail you keep in touch with friends all over the country, practically free of charge. Also, the wealth of knowledge that you can pick up. You can ask the computer with your search engines any question at all and come up with thousands of answers. You have to choose the one you like.

Interviewer: Do you see some particular dangers, for you even, but particularly for children?

Lisa: I mean, at this point I feel as though I'm, you know, like an adult, so I can kind of censor what I want to look at and things like that, but kids don't necessarily have that and are a little bit more curious, so I think that they definitely need that supervision.

PREVIEW

 Ask students What would you do if you saw a person forget something in a restaurant? What if the person were a famous actor?

REVIEW

 Ask comprehension questions. Play the video episode again if necessary.

Where are Marie and Cheryl? (in a restaurant)
Who do they see? (David Doolittle—an actor)
What has he forgotten? (his hat, gloves, cell phone, and keys)

What does Marie give back to him first? (his hat)

Where did Marie say she found it? (under the table)
What does Cheryl tell Marie to do? (to return the rest of his things)

What does Marie do? (She returns the gloves.)
Does she introduce herself to David Doolittle? (yes)
What is the last thing she returns? (his keys)
Does she return his cell phone? (no)
Why does David Doolittle give Marie his phone number? (so Marie can call him at his office if she finds his cell phone)

EXTENSION

Oral work

• Discussion. Ask students these questions:

Why does Marie decide to keep Mr. Doolittle's cell phone?

Do you think Marie will call David Doolittle to return his cell phone? Why or why not? Do you think what Marie does is OK? Have you ever done something similar?

 Pair work: role play. Have students work in pairs to predict what will happen next and role-play a scene. Tell students to decide whether the scene will be with Cheryl and Marie or with Marie and David Doolittle. Invite students to perform their role plays to the class.

Written work

- On the board, write If I were Marie, I would . . . Have students finish this sentence and write a paragraph describing what they would do.
- Ask Do you think David Doolittle knows Marie has his cell phone? Does he want her to call him? Tell students to write a story from Mr. Doolittle's point of view.

LANGUAGE NOTE: Mobile is another word for cell phone. It is more common in British English.

VIDEO SCRIPT

Cheryl and Marie are having desserts in the café when Marie finds things left behind by the actor David Cheryl: I can't believe I'm eating this.

Marie: I can't believe you are eating it either.

Cheryl: You know, that man looks like someone I know. That man just left something at his table.

Marie: That's David Doolittle . . . the actor! He left his hat. And his gloves. And his cell phone. And his keys. Hold these.

Cheryl: What are you doing?

Marie: I'm giving him back his hat.

Cheryl: What about these?

Marie: Sir! Excuse me, sir! Is this hat yours? Doolittle: That's mine, yes, thank you. Did I leave it here?

Marie: I saw it under your table.

Doolittle: Thanks again. Marie: You're welcome.

Cheryl: If you don't give him back the rest of his things, I will.

Marie: Just wait. Sir! Excuse me, sir!

Doolittle: Yes?

Marie: Are these gloves yours?

Doolittle: Yes, they're mine. I'm forgetting everything, aren't I?

Marie: Aren't you David Doolittle?

Doolittle: Well, I am, yes.

Marie: I'm Marie LePage. I'm a big fan. Doolittle: Thank you. And thanks for these.

Marie: My pleasure. Mr. Doolittle?

Doolittle: What would I do without you? You know, I'm missing my mobile. Have you seen it?

Marie: I don't see it under your table.

Doolittle: Well, I'm in a hurry. If you do find it, would you be so kind as to call me at my office?

Marie: I'd be happy to. Doolittle: Thank you. Bye.

Marie: I have David Doolittle's phone number.

And his cell phone.

• Take a poll. Ask Do you think when Marie didn't return David Doolittle's cell phone, it was stealing? Do you think it was the wrong thing to do?

REVIEW

 Ask comprehension questions. Play the video episode again if necessary.

What are Cheryl and Marie talking about? (David Doolittle's cell phone)

Does Cheryl think what Marie did is OK? (no)
Does Marie think it was OK? (yes) Why? (She says she didn't steal the cell phone and that she is returning it tonight.)

Does Cheryl think it's OK for a woman to invite a man to dinner? (no) Does Marie? (yes)

How did Bob and Cheryl meet? (They met in a park, where Cheryl lost her bag and Bob helped her find it.)

What did Bob do that is similar to what Marie is doing now? (He waited two hours to tell Cheryl that he found her bag.)

Why does Bob tell Cheryl this story now? (to show her that what Marie is doing is not so wrong)

EXTENSION

Oral work

- Discussion. On the board, write Women don't ask men to dinner. Ask Who said this? (Cheryl) Does Marie agree? (no) Do you agree? Why or why not?
- Group work: role play. Divide the class into groups of four. Have students role-play the characters and reenact what happened in the video episode.

Written work

- Point out that Cheryl keeps saying that she thinks what Marie did is wrong. Ask students Do you think it's wrong? Have students write a paragraph explaining their opinion.
- Have students write a summary of Cheryl's version of how she and Bob met.

VIDEO SCRIPT

Cheryl and Marie argue about the fact that Marie didn't return David Doolittle's cell phone.

Cheryl: Well, I still think it's wrong.

Marie: Cheryl...

Bob: What's going on?

Cheryl: Marie just stole David Doolittle's cell phone.

Paul: David Doolittle was here?

Marie: I didn't steal it. He left it, and I'm waiting to return it until tonight.

Cheryl: He asked if it was under the table. You said it wasn't.

Marie: It wasn't under the table because it was in my pocket.

Cheryl: Well, I think that's wrong.

Marie: It's not wrong. He'll get his phone back.

Cheryl: What do you two think?

Bob: Well ...
Paul: Um ...

Cheryl: What are you going to do now?

Marie: I'm going to call him tonight, tell him I found his phone, and ask him to meet me for dinner.

Cheryl: You're going to ask him to dinner?

Marie: Sure. Why not?

Cheryl: Women don't ask men to dinner. Do they?

Marie: Oh, don't be so old-fashioned, Cheryl.

This is the twenty-first century. Women ask men out to dinner all the time. Don't they?

Cheryl: Well, I still think it's wrong. You should have given him the phone.

Bob: Cheryl, I have to tell you something.

Cheryl: What?

Bob: Do you remember when we met?

Cheryl: Of course. I was at the park. I'd lost my bag and you helped me find it. It took us two hours. We talked and talked and I became more interested in Bob than in finding the bag.

Bob: Well, actually, I found your bag in two minutes, but I waited two hours to tell you. I thought you were the most amazing woman I had ever met. If you had found your bag right away, you would have left and we wouldn't be here right now.

Cheryl: That is so romantic! That's why I love this man!

Marie: See? If it worked for Bob, it might work for me.

Cheryl: You and David Doolittle! That would be fantastic! Call! Call him!

ANSWER KEY

A. 1. b 2. a 3. b 4. b

B. 1. call him tonight 2. tell him I found his phone 3. ask him to meet me for dinner

C. Individual responses may include variations like the following:

I was in a park one day when I first met Cheryl. She lost her bag, and I helped her find the bag. I actually found her bag in two minutes, but I waited for two hours to tell her. I thought she was the most amazing woman I'd ever met. I kept her bag for two hours, so we could keep talking to each other.

Interview: What would you do?

PREVIEW

 Tell students to imagine that they are walking down the street and see some cash on the ground.
 There is no one around. Ask individual students What would you do?

REVIEW

• Ask comprehension questions. Play the video segment again if necessary.

What three ethical decisions do the people talk about? (incorrect bill at a restaurant, mistake on a price tag in a store, and money found on the street)

What would Jessica do if there were a mistake on a restaurant bill? What would Martin do? (Both of them would tell the waiter or waitress.)

What would Catherine do if there were a mistake on a price tag in a store? What would Jessica do? (Both of them would ask the cashier.)

What would Catherine do if she found cash on the street? (She would take it.) What would Christiane do? (She would leave it if she saw a poor person around.)

Oral work

- Pair work: role play. Have students work in pairs to choose one of the characters from the video segment and role-play the short conversation between the interviewer and the interviewee.
- · Group work: discussion. Have students work in groups to discuss the three situations. Ask Would you do the same things as any of the people interviewed? What would you do differently?

Written work

- On the board, write You make judgments all the time and not everything is equal. Then tell students to write a paragraph and say whether they agree or disagree with Martin and explain why.
- Pair work. Have students work in pairs to think of another ethical situation and write it down as a question. Combine pairs into groups of four and have them exchange questions and answer them. Then have each group discuss the situations.

VIDEO SCRIPT

Interviewer: If you got a bill in a restaurant that was obviously wrong, what would you do? Jessica: I would tell the waitress and ask her if everything's OK.

Martin: I think they should tell the waiter. Interviewer: And what should they tell them? Martin: That they're given too much change or they're undercharged.

Interviewer: How about if a person's shopping in a department store and an expensive piece of clothing has a tag on it that's obviously wrong-it's priced too low-should that person tell the cashier or just pay for it?

Catherine: I usually ask. That's me, though. Jessica: Well, I would go to the cashier, or I think everybody should go to the cashier, at least ask if that's right. And if he says it's right, then at least you tried it.

Interviewer: And then suppose you found some cash on the street, not in a wallet, just some cash lying on the street. What would you do with it?

Catherine: I'd pick it up and put it in my pocket. Christiane: I usually do not pick up money if a very poor person is around because I think a poor person needs it more than I do, so I'd leave it lying there.

Interviewer: So are the three situations—the restaurant, the department store, and the cash on the street—the same or different?

Martin: I think each one is different.

Interviewer: Why?

Martin: You make judgments all the time and not everything is equal.
